Chicago Hails Roosevelt's Denunciation Of Monopoly

30 Persons Hurt In Stadium Jam

Its Record Is New Deal's Answer to Opponents, Vast Throng Hears.

Text of the President's Address—Page 10.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 14. — President Roosevelt tonight claimed for his Administration credit for saving "private profit and free enterprise" after American democracy had been menaced under 12 years of Republican administrations by a "concentration of wealth and power."

He spoke to thousands of persons who gave him an almost hysterical welcome that lasted several minutes as he walked onto the stage of Chicago's huge stadium to confront a deafening roar and a sea of madly fluttering flags.

His appearance was preceded by a demonstration so huge that Chicago Loop traffic was paralyzed. Thousands of persons lined sidewalks solidly for a 2-mile stretch watching a parade in which Barnet Hodes, one of the co-managers of the mass demonstration, said 150,000 persons marched. Roaring fireworks and bursting aerial bombs added to the mass of color and sound.

Thirty persons were slightly injured in the crush about the stadium.

Grip of Monopoly.

To the people who jammed all the 26,000 seats in the hall, overflowed into the aisle and the streets outside, and to a national radio audience, the President contended that "above all" the New Deal had attempted to break what he called "the deadly grip" of monopoly on American business.

As he had asserted yesterday in Wichita, Kans., he said again tonight that the Republican leadership was attempting to spread fear through "fairy tales" and "bogey men."

"You have heard about how antagonistic to business this Administration is said to be," he remarked. "* * * it was this Administration which saved the system of private profit and free enterprise after it had been dragged to the brink of ruin by these same leaders who now try to scare you."

"Businessmen, bankers and industrialists came to Washington and found it like an emergency hospital and not a "dangerous bureaucracy," he said. They were given treatment, he added, and "some of them are even well enough to throw their crutches at the doctor."

Along the four-mile route from the railway station, the Chief Executive was given the greatest reception of his 5,000-mile Western re-election campaign tour.

15,000 to a Block.

Police Capt. Thomas Kilroy estimated 15,000 spectators to the block for 16 to 18 blocks. Clayton Smith, chairman of the meeting, placed the crowd outside the auditorium at from 50,000 to 100,000. Mayor Edward J. Kelly, first speaker, paid high tribute to the President as the man who "took us out of the mire of despair and gave us hope and confidence; a man who has done away with bread lines." Then he introduced the President, who waved a greeting to the cheering audience.

A second standing ovation was accorded the President when he stepped to the microphones on the platform to start his address, which was directed primarily to business men.

"You have heard about how antagonistic to business this Administration is said to be," he said, "you have heard all about the dangers which the business of America is supposed to be facing if this Administration continues.

Private Profit System.

"The answer to that is the record of what we have done. It was this Administration which saved the system of private profit and free enterprise after it had been dragged to the brink of ruin by these same leaders who now try to scare you."

A few moments later he remarked that the "struggle" against monopoly is a struggle for and not against American business—a struggle to preserve individual enterprise and economic freedom.

He claimed tonight that there had been a recovery from depression that could not "just happen," and that it was the New Deal that had accepted "the responsibility to save

First District-Girdler Bogs Down, 'Holes Up'

Sidney Olson, a reporter for The Post, has become a District-girdler. He is doing a Jules Verne around the District of Columbia, in an attempt to find out just where the District line goes. He is shown above in a typical reconnoitering pose on a box car bearing the abbreviation for the Latin words meaning "the willies." Staff Photographer Klemm, who has not worked for the Resettlement Administration and, therefore, knows nothing about superimposing pictures of droughts and things, swears that the letters "D. T." are genuine. Inset is Artist Sotto's conception of the squirrel which skeptically watched Mr. Olson's takeoff on the girdling expedition from Zero Milestone.

(The Post, in the interest of science, and to get the folks' minds off that election the papers have been mentioning so frequently lately, and because the young man involved wasn't doing much anyway, has assigned Mr. Sidney Olson to girdle Washington. He is to follow the District line, and follow it as rapidly as he can. This is because there have been complaints. Some of our citizens complain that they do not know where the District line is. Neither does Mr. Olson, judging from his first reports. Follow the adventures of The Post's District girdler as reported in this newspaper daily, unless you have something important to do.)

By Sidney Olson.

A Staff Correspondent.

Halfway-Around-the-District, Oct. 14 (By Carrier Pigeon).—Somewhere off Peabody street northeast, the District Line runs into a hole. As The Post's correspondent in this hectic dash around the District, I have decided to stay in the hole for the night and to resume the race tomorrow. Maybe I will gnaw a little pemmican to keep my strength up, if any of the neighbors have any pemmican. So far I have subsisted solely on chocolate milkshakes and as a result have a dull, gummy feeling.

So far as I know, The Post is far ahead of all other competitors in the race to girdle the District. The other District-girdlers are nowhere. On Western avenue a boy on a kiddie-kar paced me for several blocks, but eventually I wore him down. I believe he dropped out.

The District-girdling dash started at Zero Milestone at high noon yesterday. The audience at the start was very small, consisting of a small boy knocking flyballs to another small boy, and several squirrels, all of whom observed the take-off without interest.

Circling Ellipse road, your correspondent, who is using all means of travel, from bicycles to street-cars and boats, turned sharply west down Constitution avenue to Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway.

Now began the chief problem. Where is the District line? After an exhaustive day's research, much of it spent in scrambling through bramble-bushes and wading through mudholes, and the rest of it spent in knocking on people's doors, my inevitable conclusion is that there is no District line.

Preacher Kills Sweetheart, 17, In Jealous Rage

By the Associated Press.

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Oct. 14.—Nine-year-old Charles Fain told officers today how his father paused as he shot and killed Miss Buelah Evans, 17, his former housekeeper, to kiss her and say, "I love you."

W. C. Fain, 50, the father of Charles and six other children, was held in jail here on warrants charging him with the murder last night of Miss Evans and of Loren Odell, 22, a share-cropper, who was slain as he sought to aid the girl.

Deputy Sheriff Hershel Hughlett said the boy ran to his father when he heard a shot fired and saw Miss Evans lying on the ground.

"Daddy knelt down and kissed her and said, 'I love you,'" the boy told Hughlett. "Then he got up and shot her again."

Fain, preacher, sawmill operator and deputy sheriff at Fisk, a small Butler County community, was quoted by Hughlett as saying, "I killed them. Look at me. I'm not nervous." He would say nothing more.

"Fain apparently was insanely jealous," declared Coroner J. R. Reynolds after an investigation. He said Fain had threatened to "get even" with Miss Evans when she

Landon Asks 'Liberal' Rule On Solid Base

Text of Gov. Landon's Address—Page 9.

By the Associated Press.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 15.—Contending the New Deal has confused change with progress, Gov. Alf M. Landon called tonight for a "forward-looking liberal government," based upon principles tested by time and experience.

"We know from history and from the hard school of experience that we desert the old truths only at our peril," the Republican Presidential nominee said.

Landon spoke to a crowd from a hotel balcony after a day's campaigning through Michigan's industrial centers, bringing with him a personal indorsement from the automobile State's biggest industrialist, Henry Ford.

75,000 Welcome Him.

Arriving at 7:20 p. m. Landon was driven in an open car down streets packed with spectators and fringed with red flares to the hotel. From where he stood on the balcony, the Kansan looked down on a solid sea of faces spreading more than a block in each direction. Police Chief Frank E. O'Malley estimated the crowd, including spectators along the path of Landon's car, at 75,000.

After making his talk and waving a farewell to the throng below, the Governor stood in a receiving line shaking hands with well-wishers. Looking fatigued from an arduous day, he remained less than 15 minutes before he left for the home of Senator Arthur Vandenberg for the night. The hotel lobby still was packed with people awaiting an opportunity to pass through the receiving line.

Referring to the Grand Rapids furniture industry, the Kansan exemplified his picture of the "best" government as a "progressive application of old truths" by saying:

"The craftsmen whose skill is responsible for the success of your famous industry here did not start by discarding good designs which still are famous, even though some of them go back way beyond the horse and buggy days. On the contrary they cherished and respected them."

Praised by Ford.

The nominee said the New Deal "too often has been liberal only in the spending of other people's money," and again pledged a balanced budget without depriving the needy of help or the farmer of aid.

In his statement indorsing Landon, the veteran Ford said: "I admire and believe in him; I hope he is elected."

"He ate out of a dinner bucket for years and he still thinks along with the men who carry dinner buckets," Ford said.

Woodring Unhurt As Plane Catches Fire in Oklahoma

By the Associated Press.

Tulsa, Okla., Oct. 14.—Fire broke out in a private plane carrying Harry Woodring, Secretary of War, just after the takeoff here late today, but quick maneuvering by the pilot landed the ship safely and no one was hurt.

Woodring left a few minutes later in another plane for Enid, Okla., to make a speech tonight.

Shortly after he left the ground Pilot Joe Reed, postmaster of Lawton and former Army flier, discovered fire beneath his instrument board. He swerved quickly and landed speedily in a cross wind. The plane ground-looped but was damaged only slightly.

Charlie Short, manager of the Municipal Airport, put out the flames with a fire extinguisher.

"Woodring, Reed and Rakestraw were a little nervous, but didn't say much," Short said. "The fire was right under the pilot's legs. I don't know how he escaped being burned."

Airport attaches said the fire might have been caused by a cigarette. After minor repairs Reed took off for Lawton.

Mrs. Simpson Files Divorce Suit; Husband Will Not Oppose Action

Suspect Found In Loring Case, Detective Says

Identity Is Revealed to County Grand Jury; Action to Wait.

For the first time, a particular individual is definitely suspected of the murder of Corinna Loring, 27, Mount Rainier, Md., bride-to-be, it became known yesterday.

Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, Baltimore detective assigned to the 11-month-old mystery, revealed the identity of this suspect yesterday to the Prince Georges County grand jury.

Talking to reporters afterward, Lieut. Itzel said:

"Yes, I have a suspect. There is enough evidence to find an indictment, but I don't want to take the case to court now. There is not enough evidence as yet for a trial.

"I am hopeful of a solution, but I wouldn't want to predict when it will come."

Corinne Loring, a quiet, pretty stenographer who worked in Washington, disappeared from her Mount Rainier home on the night of November 4, two days before she was to have been married to Richard Tear, 29-year-old attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital. Beaten and strangled, her body was found five days after her disappearance atop Saddleback Ridge, a lonely patch of woods about a half mile from her home.

Lieut. Itzel, who was loaned to Prince Georges County for the murder investigation, was before the grand jury yesterday for 4½ hours. He was followed by Detective Sergt. Leo Vogelsang, also of the Baltimore force, who has been assisting Itzel.

Lieut. Itzel declined to discuss with reporters the nature of the new evidence he laid before the grand jury. And he wouldn't say whether the suspect he had in mind was a man or a woman.

If the grand jury accepts his recommendation, it will not return an indictment against the suspect at this time.

The grand jury is expected to sit for another week, but State's Attorney Alan Bowie last night said he did not expect to call any witnesses in the Loring murder case. However, since the jury has the power of independent action, its members may call any witnesses they choose.

Its exhaustive review of the case yesterday followed many expressions of dissatisfaction in the county in the last few months.

Mayor Norman A. Pruitt of Mount Rainier threatened about three weeks ago to call on Gov. Harry W. Nice and Attorney General Herbert O'Conor for aid.

"The citizens of Mount Rainier," Pruitt said at the time, "have a right to know what has been done to solve this murder, but they have been left in the dark."

Two Fliers Killed Aiding Thief Hunt

Adrian, Mich., Oct. 14 (AP).—A sportsman pilot and his passenger, a deputy sheriff, were killed today when their plane crashed in a field 2 miles south of Britton, Mich., as they directed a search for two Detroit youths, wanted for automobile theft.

The men, Stanley A. Foster, Board of Education member and civic leader, and Stanley Hoisington, Lenawee County deputy sheriff, were directing the search of State police when the plane crashed. Both were dead when officers reached the wreckage.

It was first reported the officers were searching for three men who escaped from Greenfield, Ind., jail Sunday.

The boy suspects, Jack Berch, 14, and William Sinclair, 13, were found in a barn on the farm where the plane crashed.

King Cancels Message.

London, Oct. 14 (AP).—King Edward scrapped another royal precedent today—the annual Christmas message broadcast to the empire. The British monarch made known, through his secretary, he does not intend to follow his father's custom.

Path Cleared for Ex-Baltimorean, Friend of King Edward, to Gain Freedom; Case Will Be Heard in London October 27.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 14 (AP).—An "amicable" arrangement tonight paved the way for the vivacious, dark-eyed Mrs. Ernest (Wallie) Simpson, American-born friend of England's bachelor King Edward VIII, to obtain a divorce from her husband.

The suit, it was announced by the husband, has been set for hearing before Justice Jawke at the Ipswich Assizes, opening October 27.

"The case will not be defended," Simpson authorized reporters to announce. "Beyond that I have no statement to make."

Adultery—the only grounds for divorce under British law—will be the means by which the slender, dark-haired Mrs. Simpson, formerly Miss Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, Md., will seek to cut the legal knot which has bound her to the tall, handsome ex-officer in his Majesty's crack Coldstream Guards Regiment during recent months of estrangement.

The actual divorce action, under ordinary circumstances, is a mere formality, consisting of only a few minutes' testimony.

Under no circumstances, it was stated, will the name of King Edward be mentioned in court, nor will any reference be made to him.

Met King Three Years Ago.

Mrs. Ernest Simpson, central figure in the current Mayfair drama, was born in Baltimore 40 years ago, the daughter of Teackle Wallis Warfield and Alice Montague Warfield. Her friends, including His Royal Highness, King Edward VIII, call her "Wally," but in her pigtail days in Baltimore, according to old neighbors, she was "Bessie."

She met King Edward three years ago, when he was the Prince of Wales, and the story is that the meeting was brought about by the former Thelma Morgan, now Lady Furness, sister of Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt.

A mutual passion for dancing made the prince and the erstwhile Baltimore belle good friends and soon they were seen doing the fox

U.S. Employes Imperiled Daily In Unsafe Lifts

The United States Government daily is risking the lives of thousands of its employes in Washington by compelling them to ride in elevators so unsafe they would not be tolerated in privately owned buildings.

This admission of Bureau of Satndards engineers in a report to Congress last April was brought into sharp relief yesterday when it was revealed that an elevator carrying 14 Resettlement Administration employes dropped eight floors Saturday.

Two weeks before the same elevator had dropped from the first floor to the basement and District elevator engineers, who inspected the lift then, reported that it was mechanically fit, but was not designed to cope with the heavy loads imposed by the Government workers.

C. B. Mulvehill, associate mechanical engineer of the public buildings division, National Parks Service, admitted the Government daily is tempting fate by countenancing the operation of overloaded elevators and revealed that contracts are being rushed for the installation of new lifts in six Government buildings.

The greatest danger exists in the Veterans' Administration Building, where 13 obsolete elevators carry 4,000 persons to and from their desks every day, Mulvehill admitted.

Lewis Rejects Offer of Peace In Union Fight

By Felix Bruner.

Hope for immediate settlement of differences which have split organized labor into two warring camps disappeared last night amid misunderstandings and confusion.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, continued to hold out the olive branch to his fellow miner, John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Lewis refused even to examine it.

Leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization met for three hours and arrived at the same conclusion they reached six weeks ago when the ten C. I. O. unions, with more than 1,000,000 members, were suspended from the federation. The conclusion was this:

"Take us back into the federation and we will talk about settling our differences."

Max Zaritsky, head of the Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers Union, sat in with Lewis, Philip Murray and other C. I. O. leaders, and then hurried to the meeting of the federation executive council. Zaritsky's union had suggested peace negotiations.

He spent all afternoon with the council. At the conclusion of the conference the council appointed a committee of three vice presidents of the federation to meet with representatives of the C. I. O. unions

Peer Calls Liberal Socialism Cure-All for European Unrest

Liberal socialism is the Thermopylae of democracy, and a watchful England hopes she will prove more fortunate than Leonidas.

Interviewed yesterday in his room at the Mayflower Hotel, Philip Henry Kerr, of New Battle Abbey, Scotland, eleventh Marquess of Lothian, spoke of the gathering forces threatening to hurl the Old World anew into the burning crucible of conflict.

"We know not the day nor the hour they will strike," the tall, one-time secretary to a British prime minister declared. "We know not whence they shall come. But we do know that when they strike it will be with a compact and speed immeasurably greater than '14."

That fascism and communism are ever seeking to suck the democratic countries into the vortex of their hates driving Europe into two camps, was the opinion of the marquess, who said there was a growing feeling in Britain to say, "A plague on both your houses."

"Peaceful sentiment is not enough, though," Lord Lothian [illegible] "We must be strong and prepared. Even organized labor over there realizes that. Recently at their Trades Union Congress they voted, 3 to 1 in favor of rearmament. That was a reversal of policy 30 years old."

What of the recent Mosley threat? the marquess was asked. Sir Oswald Mosley is head of the British Fascist Party, which recently caused a London riot.

"British fascism, like British

Helmet Shielding Sand-Blasters Against Death From Silicosis Is Invented by a Naval Engineer

A new sand-blasting helmet that provides "guaranteed protection" against silicosis, dreaded disease that has caused the death of thousands of underground workers, has been invented by William P. Biggs, safety engineer of the Navy Department.

Although the patent still is pending, commercial manufacture of the helmet—in effect a hooded gas mask that safeguards the worker against breathing in the deadly silica dust—already has begun, the Navy placing the initial order for 50 of the helmets, Biggs revealed.

The result of more than five years of experimentation, the helmet consists of a modified gas mask with a rubberized silk hood that is slipped over the mask, covering the head and shoulders and extending to the stomach. The entire helmet weighs only 43 ounces, which, experts said, is roughly one-half the weight of the lightest sand-blasting helmets now in use.

The hood has been tested for almost a year at naval stations in various parts of the country, including the Washington and Norfolk Navy Yards, the San Diego Naval Base and the Philadelphia Naval Aircraft Factory. In every instance, Biggs said, the results have shown the helmet to be superior.

"We've studied the exhaust of these helmets and haven't been able to find a trace of silica dust large enough to be detected with microscopes," Biggs said. "As long as the worker wears this helmet he is safe from silicosis."

Oxygen for the gas mask is obtained from the same tubing in which the compressed air that keeps the sand-blasting drill going is circulated. A special device eases the pressure of the air so it can be breathed in through the mask. When the flow of compressed air for the drill is shut

World Peace Is Threatened As British Rebuff Soviet

Demand for Immediate Steps to End Rebel Aid Spurned by Briton.

Envoy Bears Order To Quit Neutrality

Virtual Blockade of Portuguese Ports Gist of Russian Note.

The Situation Abroad.

Russia's demand for immediate action to stop foreign aid to the Spanish rebels was refused by the British chairman of the international nonintervention committee.

The latest Soviet note to the committee contained a demand for a virtual blockade of Portuguese ports by French or British warships, it was revealed.

Renewed anti-Bolshevist tirades in the German press followed reports of Moscow's latest moves in the Spanish crisis.

French Rightists also attacked Russia, charging Communists were attempting to cause war between France and Germany. Meanwhile, Premier Blum's newspaper charged Rightist followers of Col. Francois de la Rocque had huge secret stores of arms.

King Leopold of Belgium, warning that rearmament by European nations was a threat to Belgium, increased the term for compulsory military service to 18 months.

In Spain, the government claimed victories on land and sea, but anxiety mounted in Madrid as unconfirmed reports said a flotilla of German torpedo boats was anchored in Spanish waters along with 12 submarines.

Briton Rebuffs Russia.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Oct. 14.—Russia's demand for immediate action to stop foreign aid to the Spanish rebels was refused tonight by Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the international nonintervention committee.

This action, increasing the threat of war in Europe, came simultaneously with revelations that Russia's latest note to the committee demanded a virtual blockade of Portuguese ports by French or British warships.

Lord Plymouth based his rebuff on two grounds:

The committee has not received Portugal's answer to charges made by Russia.

The last Soviet note, delivered Monday, failed to produce additional evidence that the neutrality pact was being violated by Fascist powers.

Quick Action Urged.

Samuel Kagan, Soviet representative, had urgently requested the committee to meet without delay to consider Russia's latest proposals. It was intimated that unless the committee acted quickly, Russia would consider herself not obligated by the neutrality pact and thus free to aid the Madrid government.

Ivan M. Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London, arrived here last night after a vacation in Moscow. Moscow dispatches said he carried orders from his government to withdraw from the nonintervention committee if that body failed to act immediately. Maisky and Kagan conferred with British foreign office officials today and urged an immediate meeting of the committee.

Lord Plymouth's comminique a few hours later was their answer, placing the next move in the international crisis squarely up to Russia. The peace of Europe may depend on Russia's decision.

Text of Russian Note.

Russia's last note was as follows:

"In connection with the question proposed in my statement handed you on October 7, which was dispatched to the last meeting of the committee, I have the honor on behalf of my government to present for urgent consideration of the committee the following:

"The bulk of the supply of munitions for the insurgents goes by way of Portugal and Portuguese ports. The minimum of absolutely urgent measures necessary to put an end to these supplies of arms and violation of the nonintervention agreement would be the immediate establishment of control over Portuguese ports.

"We demand from the committee establishment of such control. We propose to lay the realization of this control on the British or French fleets, or both fleets simultaneously.

"Without such steps as this mini-

Leaders Split Over Changes In Profits Tax

Jones, Morgenthau at Odds; Further Test of Law May Be Made.

By Robert C. Albright.

Cleavage within the Administration over proposed review and modification of the new undistributed corporate profits tax, with the Treasury hewing closely to the law as it now stands, developed last night.

The Treasury does not intend to recommend any important modifications in the law until its operation can be thoroughly tested it was said in a well-informed quarter.

A conflicting position had been taken in a radio speech by Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who suggested substantial revision, and hinted the President would not stand in the way of Congressional review.

Assembling Data.

Meanwhile, it was learned that tax experts of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue are assembling all available data on the law, together with information on other phases of the tax structure, in preparation for an early joint meeting of members of the Senate Finance and the House Ways and Means Committee.

Information collected by committee tax experts has been necessarily limited, due to the fact that the new undivided profits levy does not become operative until next January 1, and first returns will not be in until March.

But close studies of the law are in progress, and many letters from businessmen asking information and giving concrete cases of how the law will operate are being received by the joint committee. At all events, the experts will sift what data is at hand and have a body of information ready when the committee decides whether or not to open the law for revision.

Unless membership of the House and Senate tax drafting committees is materially changed by the November elections, indications are that a trial period of operation will be insisted on, in the absence of direct intervention by the President.

It was pointed out in one quarter that injustices wrought by the law may be remedied retroactively, and that this may be the course followed, unless a preponderance of evidence can be shown in advance.

No meeting of the joint committee on Internal Revenue has yet been scheduled. Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, who was in Washington early this week conferring with experts, has indicated one will be called at an early date by Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee.

Proposing important modifications in the act, RFC Chairman Jones had suggested exemptions for modernization, replacement of plant, machinery and equipment, rebuilding, and further provision for debt-ridden corporations.

Confident of Consent.

The President, who played the leading role in forcing the law through Congress without these exemptions, has not publicly stated he favors further concessions, despite complaints of inequities from a solid business front. Jones expressed confidence that the President would consent to a review of the law. But it is understood the Treasury has not been informed of any change in attitude by the President.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., has taken advantage of every opportunity to say he is satisfied with the undivided profits tax as now drafted. When he recently announced plans for Congressional revision of the tax structure, changes in the new statute were not suggested in his statement.

The Treasury attitude was said yesterday to be unchanged, despite the Jones proposals and in spite of increasing revenue from other tax sources.

Boat Strikers Bar French Waterways

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP).—Barriers of boats stretched across the Seine and other rivers and canals by striking sailors today blocked France's principal waterways.

The sailors' strike, which has been persisting for a month, virtually became general as employes on small craft joined those of larger companies in demanding higher pay.

Their action cut off Paris' principal source of gasoline, coal and other essential products.

The strike situation was reviewed by a council of ministers. Means of restoring labor peace were being sought.

Seeks Wine in Reservoir.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Charles Crance, of New York City, will wade out into the waters of Wanague Reservoir to see if he left any rare wine in the cellar of his home he abandoned when the reservoir was built in 1928. Although the house was torn down the foundations were left. Lack of rain has lowered the water level in the reservoir and today Crance received permission to inspect the remains of his former home.

Democrats Show Two Policies on Liquor to Put Landon on Defensive; Dr. High Rises.

By Franklyn Waltman

DUE to surreptitious efforts by the Democrats to inject prohibition as an issue into the current Presidential campaign, Gov. Alf M. Landon twice in recent days has been forced publicly to reiterate his attitude on this ancient question, namely, that the Nation has rendered an overwhelming verdict in regard to it and that "it is up to each State to determine its own policy on liquor."

WALTMAN.

President Roosevelt, on several occasions in the last week, proudly has boasted he does not make one kind of speech in the East and one of a different character in the West. But he has done nothing to stop his party henchmen from portraying him as an ardent wet in the populous East and, through his complete silence on the question, as sympathetic with the drys in the West and South.

When Gov. Landon's nomination seemed inevitable last spring, Charles Michelson, the astute Democratic publicity director, opened up a barrage on him as a dry who would extend to the Nation the prohibition enjoyed by Kansas and as a minion of the W. C. T. U. He apparently thought this issue was the best line of attack on Gov. Landon in the East, where he was strong.

Whatever the merits of that line of attack, Mr. Michelson suddenly became silent regarding it. But he did not throw it out of the window. The Democratic strategists put it under blankets and now they are bringing it out in stealthy fashion and through subordinate speakers in the big cities.

The mufflers apparently were placed on Mr. Michelson in order that he might not upset another course of campaign strategy for which he has never shown any enthusiasm. That is the activity of Dr. Standley High and his Good Neighbor League, formed to win back to Mr. Roosevelt the church vote, particularly that of the clergy.

Dr. High has been a militant prohibition leader. As editor of the Christian Herald, he awarded a trip to the Holy Land, all expenses paid, to Bishop James Cannon, jr., for the part he played in defeating Al Smith in 1928—an undertaking of the bishop which brought censure to him from the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee and in which bigotry played a part, but which Dr. High termed the "most distinguished religious service" of the year. Dr. High today is one of the chief strategists of the Roosevelt campaign. It is no wonder Al Smith feels ill whenever he surveys the leadership of his party.

The ascent of Dr. High into the Democratic high command put a quietus on openly attacking Gov. Landon as a dry or citing repeal as a New Deal achievement. It is really amazing that in the agonizing and unprecedented volume of oratory poured out at the Democratic National Convention not one word was said about repeal, the more amazing since it represented fulfillment of one plank of a platform generally disregarded.

Nor since the conventions has the President or Democratic headquarters boasted of prohibition repeal. The reason is clear. To do so would have handicaped Dr. High. But quietly the word has been passed along to Democratic leaders in the large cities to have local and neighborhood speakers emphasize prohibition, asserting that the President is responsible for repeal and that Gov. Landon is a dry. This explains Gov. Landon's utterances last week on the prohibition question.

The truth of the matter is that prohibition is not an issue between the two major Presidential candidates, and any dry leader you ask will say so. Not in this century have the prohibition organizations kept so aloof from the Presidential campaign. Without funds, with their followings badly scattered and most of their leaders yielding up the ghost, the prohibition organizations have reached their lowest ebb in many years.

The old triumvirate of dry leaders—Bishop Cannon, Dr. F. Scott McBride and Dr. Clarence True Wilson—are gone with the wind, and even memory of them fades from men who four and eight years ago were deluged with their outpourings and press releases.

Bishop Cannon, some time ago in a North Carolina hospital, is reported back in California attending his parochial duties. His church has abandoned his old organization—the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal Church South—and has divided its functions among other boards of the church.

Dr. McBride, who was superintendent of the Antisaloon League of America when the prohibition ship went down, has abandoned his post and has gone to labor in the Pennsylvania vineyard. The Antisaloon League, the name of which once made politicians tremble, is now without a superintendent, getting along—without doing much—under the direction of Edward B. Dunford, its general counsel.

Broken in health, Dr. Wilson has retired to Oregon, relinquishing his post as general secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals to Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, who, with Deets Pickett, still directs a skeleton staff. But they are lonely men. No longer do reporters beat a track to their door and their task of coaxing out of the faithful sufficient dollars to keep the organization going is a difficult one. Thus they are lying low, hoping that in some other year they may arise to the heights of their predecessors—as men who can crack the whip over Congress.

Only Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, Presidential candidate of the Prohibition Party, aggressively carries on the fight. Nothing has appeared about him in the public prints for weeks. But I am informed that within the limit of available funds he is making a valiant, if hopeless, fight, speaking in many cities. But even the professional drys fail to show enthusiasm for him. May I be pardoned for suggesting that the dry organizations rapidly are drying up themselves but not the country.

Bishops Stress Threat To Religious Liberty

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—A warning against the "persistent assault" on religious liberty was sounded today by the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The prelates, assembled in conference from all sections of the United States, urged a careful study of Christian relations to "those issues which are arising from the claims of secularism and the totalitarian state."

Although no nation was mentioned in a resolution adopted by the bishops, a spokesman reported the situation in strife-torn Spain came in for consideration.

I. C. S. Founder Dies.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 14 (AP).—Thomas J. Foster, 93, founder of the International Correspondence School in Scranton, died today. Born in Pottsville, he served as a second lieutenant with the Union forces in the Civil War.

when and if they should be ready to meet. But the council did not indicate that it would be willing to rescind the suspension order.

Meanwhile, the Federal Maritime Commission continued its struggle to prevent a walkout of West Coast longshoremen, a strike that threatens to cripple shipping on the entire Pacific Coast. The commission sent a sharply worded telegram to the committee carrying on negotiations in connection with the impending strike demanding that operations continue "until investigations are completed and findings announced."

The commission rejected a proposal for a 10-day extension of negotiations. The board said that it could not "accept any limit of time as to the period of its investigations." Operators have agreed to continue indefinitely under existing agreements, but the unions are blocking the move.

Possibility of some delay was seen, however, in the action in San Francisco of the Maritime Federation of the Pacific. According to the Associated Press, the federation, a union organization, unanimously adopted a resolution giving its negotiations committee power to conduct a referendum on the question of calling a strike on October 28. Under previous arrangements the strike would have started today.

Labor leaders on the coast were reported to be opposed to any negotiations that would prevent a settlement before the November 3 election, evidently hinting that votes might be traded for favorable terms.

The committee named by the American Federation of Labor Executive Council to stand by and wait for a possible meeting with C. I. O. unions consists of three federation vice presidents, George Harrison, Felix Knight and Matthew Woll.

Different versions of what happened during the executive council conference attended by Zaritsky came from the hatters' president and from Green. Green said after the conference that Zaritsky had no direct answer to make to the council's offer to meet with the C. I. O. Zaritsky said that he had transmitted to the council the demand of Lewis for "clarification" of its stand on the question of rescinding the suspension order.

Asked concerning Lewis' demand for clarification, Green somewhat heatedly replied that "there is nothing to clarify. We have not only stated our willingness to have a committee meet with representatives of the C. I. O. unions, but we have appointed the committee."

The peace proposal of the hatters contained the suggestion that members of the C. I. O. unions be permitted to vote in the A. F. of L. convention scheduled for Tampa, Fla., next month. The executive council in its reply ignored this suggestion.

Zaritsky said that he had been instructed by his own union to present the peace proposal to both sides and that he had done so.

The Campaign Arena

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Gilmour Young, national secretary of the Townsend Recovery Plan, said today he had received a telegram from Henry Cabot Lodge, jr., candidate for the United States Senate from Massachusetts, indorsing the Townsend plan.

Young quoted Lodge as saying, "the most deep seated and eternal aim of the human race is leisure and security for the aged and opportunity for the young. The Townsend movement is the embodiment of this aim, with which I am in complete accord. I am glad to tell you that as United States Senator I will support old age pensions as generously as the resources of the country will in my judgment permit."

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Democratic National Committee announced today that Dean C. Mildred Thompson, of Vassar College, has accepted the chairmanship of an educators' committee for the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Among those on the committee are the following: President Marion Edwards Park, of Bryn Mawr College; President Meta Glass, of Sweet Briar College, a sister of Senator Carter Glass of Virginia; President Constance Warren, of Sarah Lawrence College; President Mary E. Woolley, of Mount Holyoke College; Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard College; Dean Lucy Stebbins, of the University of California, and Dean Harriet Elliott, of the University of North Carolina.

Secretary of Commerce Roper said yesterday that statements by the Republican National Committee that the department had "delayed and suppressed" foreign trade statistics were an "unwarranted attack on the high character of the work of an able group of governmental employes."

All reports and statistics on foreign trade have been available "at all times" to everyone, he said.

Roper added that "most of the figures which have been compiled, where the request clearly indicated they were for campaign purposes, have been assembled in response to requests from the Republican National Committee."

Secretary of Interior Ickes yesterday said the decision of Ralph B. Strassburger, Norristown, Pa., publisher and twice a delegate to Republican National Conventions, to support President Roosevelt was evidence Republican liberals would not be deceived by the "fake liberalism" of Gov. Alf M. Landon.

A statement issued by Ickes said: "No man who worked for the nomination of Hiram Johnson in 1920, as did Mr. Strassburger, could in good conscience go along with the Hearsts, Coughlins, Brundys, Pews, Mellons and du Ponts in 1936. Mr. Strassburger's declaration for the President is an effective blow that will be felt, particularly in Pennsylvania, where he has a large following."

Rapid City, S. Dak., Oct. 14 (AP).—Gifford Pinchot, twice Governor of Pennsylvania, in an address rapping "reactionaries" tonight lauded Gov. Alf. M. Landon as a "Bull Mooser" in every respect, declaring he would eliminate what Pinchot termed "wastes and inefficiencies" of the New Deal.

Pinchot added that he was "against reaction and reactionaries wherever I find them, in my own party or any other party," asserting:

"What I think of the Liberty League would take the paint off a fence."

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Democratic National Committee announced today that Vice President John N. Garner will speak from his home at Uvalde, Tex., next Saturday in a Nation-wide radio broadcast.

The Vice President will defend the Roosevelt Administration against charges of radicalism, the announcement said. The broadcast will be from 8 to 8:30 p. m.

Bristol, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—"I can see no reason for any Democrat in Virginia failing to support the entire ticket in November," said Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson today in a statement he authorized State Senator C. J. Harkrader, publisher of the Bristol Herald Courier, to release.

"I am greatly interested in the campaign in Virginia and hope the result will show a splendid majority for President Roosevelt, exceeding if possible that of 1932."

He said he was interested especially in the re-election of Representative Flannagan, Ninth District.

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, today replied to Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton's recent prediction of a Republican victory with the declaration that "Mr. Roosevelt will carry every State that he carried in 1932 and will make some gains."

Farley said at a press conference he was "definitely certain" that Roosevelt would carry Pennsylvania and its large electoral vote.

Siege Awaited, Trench Is Dug Around Madrid

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Oct. 14.—A giant trench-digging machine swung into action in the Madrid area tonight, hastily throwing up a line around the capital in preparation for a possible long-drawn siege.

Government sources claimed victories on land and sea, but at the same time anxiety mounted as unconfirmed reports said a flotilla of German torpedo boats was anchored in Spanish waters along with 12 submarines.

Dynamite-throwing Asturians became heroes tonight as the government urged proletariat armies to take a lesson from the taciturn miners now reportedly blasting their way into the insurgent stronghold of Oviedo, on the far northern front.

Fresh Advances.

The war ministry asserted Asturian warriors made fresh advances, cornering insurgents in a cathedral and barracks—taunting them to come forth against the threat of upraised fists clutching dynamite—while government artillery shelled the rebel havens.

(Dispatches from Saint Jean de Luz quoted government sources as saying Socialist forces killed or wounded 1,000 insurgents in a violent battle near Oviedo. A rebel relief column marching to the Bay of Biscay city, it was reported, fell back and at least momentarily abandoned its drive to relieve a surrounded insurgent garrison at Oviedo.)

Other government advances were reported in the Toledo sector, where the war ministry said Socialist troops hammered the enemy back 5 miles in a sharp engagement centered around Mocejon, and on the outskirts of the insurgent-held town of Bargas, 5 miles north of Toledo on the highway to Madrid.

On sea, Spanish government submarines reportedly sank two insurgent troopships near Tangier, off the Atlantic coast of Spanish Morocco. Many bodies of the victims were washed up on the beaches between Arzila and Larache.

All-Day Battle.

Madrid, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—Rebels counter-attacked loyalists during today's government offensive against San Martin de Valdeigesias and broke the spearhead of the loyalist drive in the Navalperal sector. Rebel and loyalist aviation was locked in a furious battle in the vicinity of San Martin all day.

Hundreds of reinforcements were rushed from Madrid toward the fighting front, 35 miles west of the capital.

The rebel forces in San Martin, Cebreros, El Tiemblo and El Hoyo were reinforced by hundreds of insurgent troops hurried there from Navalperal.

Ten-Day Truce.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—The Basque nationalist government, which has won control of Bilbao from anarchists and Communists, has agreed to a ten-day truce during which 1,450 hostages—chained in the holds of prison ships in the harbor—will be freed, the International Red Cross said today.

The Basques brought an end to weeks of terror and bloodshed in Bilbao by driving the anarchists out of power, simultaneously fighting off rebels who were attempting to capture the city.

At the same time the Burgos rebel provisional government, which has many of its wealthiest and most influential supporters among the hostages, has been asked not to bomb Bilbao until the negotiations have been completed. Dr. Marcel Junod, representative of the International Red Cross, was at Burgos today trying to obtain consent to the truce and bring about the shipment of hostages.

Aerial 'Box Cars' Start Runs Oct. 19

Air freight service utilizing special planes equipped as "flying box cars" will be inaugurated by Transcontinental and Western Air on its line on October 19, according to an announcement made yesterday by Jack Frye, T. W. A. president.

Multi-motored all-metal airplanes with a pay load capacity of 3,500 pounds, will be used to start this innovation in transportation. At first operations will be conducted on the T. W. A. line between New York and Chicago with intermediate stops at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Columbus and Indianapolis.

Midnight to dawn service will be offered in each direction with departures from New York and Chicago late at night and arrivals at the other terminal before the opening of business.

Sir Patrick Calls Her 'Naughty'

BETTE DAVIS.

Bette Davis Broke a Contract To Line Her Purse, Court Hears

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 14.—Bewigged English barristers today argued in court over whether an American movie actress' contract could be broken if she:

Had a baby.

Divorced her husband before three years.

Was forced to attend a political dinner.

These intricacies of a Hollywood contract were debated in an injunction hearing to decide whether Bette Davis, actress, was legally under contract to Warner Bros., or whether she was entitled to make a film for a British company in England.

Said Sir Patrick Hastings, representing the Warners:

Sir Patrick brought to light the baby, divorce and political dining aspects of the case during the questioning of his client, Jack Leonard Warner, vice president of the American film company.

Opposing counsel, Sir Patrick declared, had held that Miss Davis' contract was a pretty stiff one, and that it had been broken because she was forced to dine with politicians.

Sir William Jowitt, Miss Davis' counsel, asked whether Warner's Brother, Harry, had not asked Miss Davis to sign an agreement that she wouldn't divorce her husband for three years, and including the other stipulations.

"I am sure," replied Jack Warner, "that my brother never made any such proposal or even thought of it."

Miss Davis is married to Harmon O. Nelson, jr., California orchestra leader.

Regarding the "required" political dining of Miss Davis, Warner said he told seekers after her attendance at a Jefferson Day dinner in New York, "I can't request her to appear because it would appear political, but if you care to ask her, it would be satisfactory to me."

Miss Davis, throughout today's session, smiled and blinked her long eyelashes at the court spectators. She was turned out in a chic red and blue checked tweed coat with a matching beret perched jauntily on her blonde curls.

Sir Patrick told the court:

"What this young lady is seeking to do is in effect to tear up her contract and say that whether she is right or wrong the court will not grant an injunction against her."

Tydings Scores Landon Views In Talk Here

Senator Says Policies Are Same That Brought Ruin in 1929.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, in a radio speech last night accused Gov. Alfred M. Landon of offering "the same old policies which in 1929 plunged this country into economic ruin."

Tydings, speaking before the District Lawyers' Roosevelt and Garner Club, declared that Landon's "every utterance" demonstrated his favor of policies which prevailed during the last three Republican administrations. In an attack on the Republican nominee's farm policy he said:

"Mr. Landon stated that he would pay to agriculture a bounty on that portion of crops raised by the farmers for consumption in the United States. Impartial economists figure that this policy would cause a national drain on the United States Treasury of about $2,000,000,000 per year."

The Maryland Senator characterized Landon as "a man mounting the horse of economic nationalism and riding off in all directions at one and the same time."

Criticizing Landon's views on reciprocal trade treaties, Tydings said:

"Thus, you have the spectacle of a candidate who believes in trade restrictions for the United States, notwithstanding that we produce more than we consume—a candidate who would pay $2,000,000,000 a year from the Federal Treasury in bounties, but who at the same time would also reduce taxes and balance the budget."

Another speaker on the program, John J. Wicker, jr., of Richmond, Va., told the lawyers that since President Roosevelt's inauguration, "we have been surely and steadily marching forward on the road to recovery."

At the present time, he said, the Nation stood "at the crossroads" with three possible choices before it.

"It must turn backward to those so-called 'good old days' and get back again 'in status quo,'" he said, "or it must go off in some wild, radical tangent such as now is being so vociferously advocated over the radio by the politician-priest; or it must continue to press forward on the Administration's program of progress."

Fidelity Branch Official Admits $2,500 Larceny

William S. Herndon Jailed After He Is Unable to Raise Bail.

Pleading guilty to a charge of larceny of $2,500, William S. Herndon, former manager of the Georgetown Branch of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, was lodged in the District Jail yesterday following arraignment before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage Tuesday.

Herndon, 34-year-old Alexandria resident, was returned here by Department of Justice agents Tuesday from Omaha. He disappeared June 29 after an alleged shortage was discovered in his accounts.

Commissioner Turnage ordered Herndon held under $3,000 bond for the Grand Jury. Unable to raise bail, he was jailed.

Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the Fidelity Association, already has been indicted on 20 counts of larceny and 8 additional charges of forgery. Rhodes pleaded not guilty and is out on bond awaiting trial.

Treasury officials ordered the association closed after the arrest of Rhodes July 18. The prosecutors say no connection has been found in the two cases.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring little spots often result from a slight, temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing, or sometimes they are more persistent due to deeper internal causes.

While properly treating the underlying cause, you can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment that will keep the medication in contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For more than 40 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritation and aids healing. It also treats the oil pores where many surface pimples start. Washing first with Resinol Soap quickens the pleasing results.

Buy a jar of Resinol Ointment and cake of Resinol Soap from any druggist. For free sample write Resinol, Dept. 10, Baltimore, Md.

Knox Charges Farmer-Labor, New Deal Link

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 14.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican Vice Presidential nominee, challenged President Roosevelt tonight to tell whether he indorses the Farmer-Labor platform in Minnesota which Knox termed "pure socialism."

This was one of more than a dozen questions which Knox, in an address prepared for delivery in a party rally here, called on the President to answer.

Recent withdrawal of two Democratic candidates in Minnesota, who withdrew in favor of Farmer-Labor rivals was recalled by the speaker. He said the Administration had "scrapped the Democratic Party and joined up with the Farmer-Labor." Referring to some of the Farmer-Labor Party's planks, he added:

"We have a proposal that the Government take over our coal, iron and copper mines. I think the President owes it to his remaining Democratic followers to explain whether he approves this plank."

"This platform also declares for Government ownership of all essential monopoly industries. They include, I believe, railways, street car systems, electric plants, telephone and telegraphs. Here again the President owes it to his followers to explain whether he indorses this plank.

Asks About NRA Future.

"This platform also calls for Government ownership of banks, except banks of local ownership serving a limited clientele. Where does the President stand on this plank?"

Knox declared "nobody knows what it (the Administration) intends to do about anything." Some of his queries were:

"What is the present Administration planning to do with our money system?"

"Why are they putting our gold in a hole in Kentucky?"

"What is Mr. Morgenthau doing with that two billion dollar stabilization fund?"

"If the President is re-elected will we have another NRA?"

"The President does not like the Supreme Court's power to declare his projects unconstitutional. What does he plan to do to the Supreme Court?"

Democratic Party Scrapped.

"What is the future program of the Government in the field of electric power? How long is farm production to be cut down by Mr. Wallace, when we are now dependent upon foreign-grown products. How much of a deficit will the Treasury create before it begins issuing paper money under the Thomas inflation act?"

trot, the rhumba and other dances in the night clubs of London. When King George died and Edward ascended the throne, there was considerable speculation as to what would happen to the latter's friendship with Mrs. Simpson. It was hoped by many of those in the court that Edward, with his new responsibilities, would break away from "the Americans."

Queen's Code Recalled.

They hoped, too, that the young King would remember that, under the stern code of his mother, Queen Mary, divorced women were barred from the British Court.

King Edward, however, dashed these hopes at the outset. He continued to be seen in the company of Mrs. Simpson, sometimes with Mr. Simpson, her second husband, along, but just as often when he was not.

In August tongues were set to wagging furiously when Mrs. Simpson joined the King and his party on the $1,500,000 yacht Nahlin for a cruise through Adriatic, the Ionian and Aegean seas. Simpson, though he was invited to go along, remained in London, and it was then that reports of a break-up in the marriage first began to drift across the Atlantic.

The reports were denied, of course.

During the cruise, Mrs. Simpson was to be seen with the King wherever the yacht anchored—in Greece, in Turkey and in other countries. A few news photographs showing the two together were published.

Back after the holiday cruise, King Edward gave the conservatives another jolt by inviting Mrs. Simpson to historic Balmoral Castle, in Scotland. Two other Americans—Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers—also were invited, and the King drove to the station at Aberdeen to meet them and Mrs. Simpson.

That was in September.

On October 2, King Edward returned to London and paid a visit to Queen Mary, who had moved out of Buckingham Palace, where she had lived with the late King George for nearly a quarter of a century, and taken up a residence in Marlborough House. It was no secret by this time that she strongly opposed her son's friendship with Mrs. Simpson.

The next day Mrs. Simpson announced that in her new home—a veritable palace in Cumberland terrace—she would "live and entertain her friends until after King Edward's coronation next May." The new house is within a ten-minute drive of Buckingham Palace.

Mr. and Mrs. Simpson had been living in a small but luxuriously furnished flat in Bryanston court, where King Edward often dropped in for afternoon tea.

A week ago moving vans began to carry Mrs. Simpson's belongings to the new Cumberland terrace house. Mrs. Simpson, according to dispatches, moved in yesterday, while Simpson took up an abode in the very exclusive Guards Club.

His announcement that his wife had filed suit for a divorce came a few hours later.

Charming and Witty.

No close friend of "Wally" Simpson's has ever called her beautiful. But that is almost the only laudatory adjective that has not been used in describing her. She has been called charming, witty, clever and magnetic.

Her hair is jet black and parted in the middle. Her skin has been compared to the "lotus petal," and her eyes—her "most striking feature"—have been described as "wide and taunting."

She also has been described as the kind of woman "who gets what she wants in life."

Her parents were far from rich, yet when she made her debut in Baltimore in 1913 she was an immediate success, particularly with the eligible bachelors of that day, who flocked around her at the dances.

In 1916, the popular young girl married Lieut. E. Winfield Spencer, U. S. N. She divorced him in Warrenton, Va., in 1927 on ground of desertion.

Not long after the divorce, while traveling abroad, "Wally" met Ernest Aldrich Simpson, a Canadian who served with the Coldstream Guards during the war, then finished his education at Harvard University, and settled in London as a ship's broker.

'Happy Couple.'

They were regarded as a happy couple, and even as recently as two weeks ago there were friends here who were willing to bet that they were "still in love."

Some persons in Mayfair, however, continued to insist that he would not stand up long under the strain of being called "Mrs. Simpson's husband." Some of them were wrong, though, in one detail. They predicted he would ask for the divorce.

For both Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, this will be the second divorce. Simpson's first wife, Mrs. Dorothea Parsons Simpson, lives in a modest, three-room apartment in New York with her two daughters. She has seen him since he married "Wally."

She said she once asked Ernest if his position was not a little "preposterous." She said he replied: "Dorothea, Wally's companionship with the King is simply a delightful friendship and only those with evil minds can give it another significance."

left recently after keeping house for him since the death of his wife eight months ago.

Odell's 17-year-old bride, Georgia, said Miss Evans planned to marry Ralph Affholder, an employe of an automobile company at Pontiac, Mich.

She told officers Fain stopped in his automobile last night and asked her, her husband and Miss Evans to ride with him to a political meeting. Charles and another of his children, Mrs. Myrtle Wallace, 25, were with him.

Stopped His Car.

About a mile south of Fisk, on a little-used country road, Mrs. Odell said Fain stopped the car.

"He told Beulah he wainted to talk to her alone," Mrs. O'Dell continued. "She kissed me good-by and told me she probably would never see me again. She then got out and she and Fain walked behind the car. They started talking in loud tones. I got out of the car and ran into the field. My husband went to try to quiet them. Then I heard shots."

Mrs. Odell said she started to her husband's assistance, but Fain forced her and his children into the car, turned and drove past the bodies into town. He surrendered last night to officers here.

Railroad Lodge To Fight Ouster

Co-operation with the joint information committee of expelled American Federation of Government Employes lodges was voted last night by the Railroad Retirement Board Lodge, one of the five "New Deal" units whose temporary certificate was revoked at Detroit last month.

An attempt to dissolve the organization was defeated as the members voted to "vindicate themselves against the false red charges" by working for rehabilitation with the A. F. G. E.

Edward J. Cox and Jessica Buck, the lodges' representatives at the Detoit convention, were elected delegates to the joint information committee. The other "New Deal" lodges who are members of the committee are those at the Social Security Board, Securities and Exchange Commission, Foreign Credit Administration and Public Assistance Division of the District Government.

Autonomy for Morocco.

Tangier, International Zone, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Spanish insurgent general, Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, in a broadcast today said the insurgent junta was considering making Spanish Morocco autonomous, reserving the right "for military intervention for defense of the country." Spanish Morocco is held by the rebels.

Citizens' Unit Elects.

Officers of the American University Park Citizens Association were elected at a meeting last night. They are: President, L. T. Savage; vice president, Mrs. E. L. McCollum; secretary, Rene W. Pinto; assistant secretary, Elaine Ettler; treasurer, Mrs. Ora G. Visel.

Thomas E. Lodge and Henry E. Donovan were chosen delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

30 Riders Shaken Up In Chicago 'L' Crash

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Thirty elevated riders were shaken up and one was injured tonight in a collision at a South Side station when the crew of one train stopped it abruptly in an effort to seize a purse snatcher who had just alighted.

The halted train, an Englewood local, was rammed by the following Howard street-Jackson Park express. The rear platform of the former and the control box of the second train were splintered. Ambulances and police cars took the injured to St. Luke's Hospital, where after first aid treatment all except seven were released.

Landon Pledges Real Liberalism In Government

his nature, Gov. Landon's mind has not been warped."

Ford said the New Deal, in its social security program, was "making to the workmen the same impossible promises that it made to the businessmen." Terming the system a "cruel joke," he asserted:

"I doubt if American mechanics are going to regard $15 a month 25 years from now as very much 'social security.' New Deal wages were always the lowest possible, because they were set at depression levels and now 'social security' is defined at the level of about 50 cents a day 20 years from now. Everybody must know that it doesn't mean anything."

Gov. Landon made five platform appearances en route here from Detroit.

The Republican Presidential nominee told an audience at Flint, automobile manufacturing city, that "when anyone, it doesn't matter who, is trying to change our form of government without the consent of the people, Americans remember only that they are Americans."

Party Lines Broken.

"That is why party lines have been broken down in this campaign," he asserted. "We are Americans first and always before we are Republicans, or Democrats, or anything else."

At Lansing, State capital and center of a rich farming section where sugar beets constitute a major crop, Gov. Landon attacked what he termed the "philosophy that underlies the farm program" of the Roosevelt Administration.

"There is no more dismal example of its harmful effects," he said, "than in the case of sugar beets that you normally grow in such abundance around Lansing. The present Administration goes on the theory that we must always import three-fourths of the sugar we use. My proposition is that our sugar beet farmers should have the opportunity to fill the national sugar bowl as wull as they can at reasonable prices to consumers.

"The Republican Party believes fundamently in giving the American market to the American farmer."

The nominee also asserted that "political" relief must be stopped.

At Flint, he criticized the social security act. Pay roll deductions to start next year under its provisions, he said, would build a "huge fund" which would be at the disposal of Washington officials.

Police Capt. Ben Haven estimated Landon's Flint audience at 30,000; Chief Alfred Seymour said the Lansing crowd approximated 10,000 and Police Sergt. R. McArthur put the Jackson throng at 30,000.

In the crowd at Battle Creek, estimated at 15,000 by Police Sergt. T. Lideman, was a youth holding high a sign, "Back to Kansas with Landon—on with Roosevelt."

Kalamazoo listeners, estimated by police at 20,000, cheered the nominee.

After spending the night at the home of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Landon planned to start at 9 a. m., 30 minutes before President Roosevelt's train is due here, on a ten-stop drive through Michigan, Indiana and Illinois. His schedule called for appearances at Sturgis, Mich.; Kendallville, Huntington, Wabash, Peru, Logansport, Lafayette and Attica, Ind., and Danville and Decatur, Ill.

Japan Will Extend Railway to Russia

Tokyo, Oct. 14 (AP).—Japan tonight drafted a second five-year railroad extension program to shove an additional 2,500 miles of track right to Russia's "back door" on the Soviet-Manchukuoan border.

The new lines, projected through bleak and bandit-infested areas of Mongolia, would enable the Japanese military command to pack troops to almost any point on the frontier within two or three days.

The network of railways was planned directly by the Japanese army general staff in Tokyo.

TO provide men who enjoy rich, fine-tasting whiskey with a guide to gentle, kind whiskey, the House of Seagram recently instituted the first investigation of its sort ever attempted. "Find out," said Seagram to an impartial group of research men, "just how the human system responds to different forms of whiskey."

Months of fact-finding effort brought an answer of vital importance. It said, in effect, "Seagram's Crown Blended Whiskies are the form of whiskey which, when used in moderation, is most likely to agree with the average man."

Thus these fine-tasting, mellow whiskies, blended the special Seagram way, are accorded the right to be called "a most wholesome form of whiskey".

D. C. National's Depositors See Dividend Hopes

RFC Loan Repaid in Full; Cash on Hand Totals Above Half Million.

Hope for depositors in the closed District National Bank gained new impetus yesterday when Receiver Justus S. Wardell made public a statement of that institution's assets for the quarter ending September 30.

Reporting the loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation amounting to $1,193,641.72 has been paid in full during the last quarter, the statement lists cash in hands of the receiver and comptroller at $573,464.29.

Total assets are computed at $1,675,754.34, from which it is eventually expected to realize sufficient cash to pay another dividend. The first return, of 50 per cent, was paid in September, 1933, and has amounted to date to a total of $1,937,100.91.

When it will be possible to pay the second dividend, or how much it will be, are questions left unanswered. It is known, however, that such a dividend cannot be declared until some time in 1937.

The fight of the receiver to collect 100 per cent stock assessment, recently clarified by court ruling, is reflected for the first time in Receiver Wardell's statement and appears under the title "stock assessment." A sum of $574,378.54 appears in the report under this heading. That is more than 50 per cent of the total assessment of $1,000,000.

Statements of the condition of other closed banks follow:

Northeast Savings Bank—Assets estimated at $203,422.22. Already dividends amounting to $903,498, or 45 per cent have been paid.

Potomac Savings Bank—Assets estimated at $627,746.18. Dividends aggregating $1,282,257, of 62½ per cent, have been paid.

Seventh Street Savings Bank—Assets now amount to $279,379.26. Dividends of 80 per cent, totaling $845,-28. have been paid.

Washington Savings Bank—Remaining assets total $133,558.54. Dividends amounting to $279,015.69, or per cent have been paid.

Three Die in Wreck As Airplane Crashes

Hilliard, Fla., Oct. 14 (AP).—Three Daytona Beach, Fla., men were killed today when their cabin monoplane crashed near here after losing one wing.

They were:

Robert Bond, salesman in Green's office.

Hearst McClelland, 45, garage owner.

The men took off from Daytona Beach this morning for Detroit in Green's plane. They passed over the Jacksonville airport and had almost crossed the Georgia-Florida State line, near here, when the accident happened.

The plane circled over a Civilian Conservation Corp camp and was heading back toward Jacksonville when watchers at the camp saw one wing crumple. All three were dead when members of the camp reached them.

Heirs of Millions Die In Airplane Wreckage

Rome, Oct. 14 (AP).—Gerardo and Paolo Parodi, heirs to their family's munitions millions, were killed today when their airplane crashed in an attempted landing at Littoria airfield. Gerardo was a member of the acrobatic squadron of the airforce and was piloting the plane which he owned.

Court Delays Assault Case Involving Dog

Pound Worker Expresses Regret for Injuring Defender of Canine.

Clyde Underwood, 41-year-old District pound employe, accused of striking a 17-year-old messenger boy Tuesday when the youth objected to alleged rough handling of a crippled dog, pleaded not guilty and was released under $100 bond in Police Court yesterday.

The case was continued by Judge Walter J. Casey when Underwood's attorney asked additional time to review the facts. Judge Casey ordered the case set for Tuesday.

Clifton Plummer, of 4300 Reed place southeast, victim of the alleged assault, appeared in the District attorney's office yesterday demanding a warrant for Underwood's arrest. Plummer's face was bruised and a tooth was broken.

While the youth was in the office of Assistant District Attorney Karl Kindleberger, Underwood appeared. Kindleberger decided to take the case right into court for a hearing. Underwood's attorney asked the continuance.

Underwood appeared repentent when he left Police Court. "I'm sorry it happened," the dog catcher said, "but the boy was annoying me with remarks while I was trying to do my work."

He said he is willing to pay the doctor and dentists bills for Plummer.

Meanwhile, the dog was at the pound last night awaiting a claimant who said she would appear today with the necessary tag fee.

Help Is Rushed To Philippines Storm Victims

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Oct. 14.—Authorities and relief officials moved swiftly through typhoon-stricken northern Luzon Island tonight, combating hunger, thirst and threats of pestilence, while the death toll rose to 408 and about 600 persons remained missing.

Belated reports said 150 miners and three other persons drowned when trapped by a wall of water as they were crossing a river in the San Narcisco district of Zambales Province, northwest of Manila.

The stricken regions called for cholera, typhoid and dysentery vaccine.

Dr. Jose Fabela, national relief director, rushed health service workers into the area to dispose of all human bodies and animal carcasses as quickly as possible.

Flood waters polluted drinking water supplies in many places and a typhoid epidemic was feared by authorities.

The National Assembly will convene in special session next week and probably will be asked to pass a $500,000 relief and rehabilitation bill to aid the four stricken provinces.

The threat of famine was reported acute in districts which relief agencies had been unable to enter because of flood waters.

Famine conditions were reported in La Union Province. Authorities there said they feared the critical food situation would cause unrest among the masses. Crop destruction was reported at 40 to 70 per cent in the province.

Ekins Off on Hop For Wake Island

Pan American Airways Station, Sumay, Guam, (Thursday), Oct. 15 (U.P.)—H. R. Ekins, of the New York World-Telegram and other Scripps-Howard newspapers, leading two other New York newspaper writers in a race around the world in commercial aircraft flying over regular lines, took off for Wake Island on the Hawaii Clipper at 5:10 a. m. today (2:40 p. m. E. S. T. Wednesday).

Ekins was due in Wake late today after a flight of 1,505 miles. He is due in San Francisco Sunday and in New York at 9 a. m. E. S. T. Monday after a flight around the world in approximately 20 and one half days over a route of more than 25,000 miles.

Far behind the race leader Dorothy Kilgallen of the New York Journal-International News Service and Leo Kieran, of the New York Times N. A. N. A. service were at Manila on the steamer President Pierce awaiting to take the China Clipper for San Francisco.

D.C. Traffic Lights To Go on New Hours After City Survey

Possibility that many District traffic lights will be turned off after 10 p. m. and that others will be kept in operation for 24 hours was seen with an exhaustive survey being made by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Van Duzer said the survey is being made to determine how many lights can be turned off at night without endangering the lives of pedestrians and jeopardizing the safety of motorists.

The survey will be completed within two weeks. Then the traffic director will review the reports from a number of checkers who have counted vehicles passing congested corners at all hours to determine where the lights are not needed after rush hours.

A preliminary report of traffic conditions in the congested area showed, Van Duzer said, that signals can be eliminated after 10 p. m. except at Seventh, Twelfth, Fourteenth and Seventeenth streets, on Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues and at Fourteenth and Water streets southwest. These lights will be kept on probably for the 24 hours, he stated.

Intrepid District Girdler Scrambles Through the Wilds of Washington

Typical scenes as Reporter Sidney Olson got under way yesterday in his District-girdling tour. He started at Zero Milestone. He went through underbrush and over water. He tramped through a dumping ground. And he claimed ground hitherto undiscovered for the District of Columbia. Above also is a picture taken out near Peabody street northwest, where Mr. Olson reported "the District line ran into a hole." And that's where Mr. Olson remained for the night, planning to resume his District-girdling flight today.

District Girdler Bogs Down and Then Holes Up

under bushes and through trees and in and out of front doors and back porches a great deal of the way. I went under some of the bushes and around a great many trees, but I drew the line at swimming the Dalecarlia Reservoir. The water felt very cold for so early in the autumn.

But the first part was very easy. The American Automobile Association map showed the Potomac River as the boundary. So I walked along the wall until I met some carp-fishermen.

These quaint characters, dressed in their native costume of overalls, shoes with toes sticking out, and very old felt hats, are very interesting, and all District-girdlers can well afford to pause to chat with them for a moment and maybe catch a carp. "Who knows?" as all globe-girdlers say in their dispatches.

The ones I talked to were named Joe and Harry. They already had caught one carp, which was securely moored to the riverwall by the ingenious device of a rope passed through his gills and fastened to a rock.

Each carp-fisherman, or bum, as they are sometimes called, has a 50-foot line, baited with cornmeal dough. He attaches the line to a thin metal rod stuck in the ground, with a little sleighbell attached to the top of the rod, and then goes to sleep.

Carp fishing is not very exhausting except when you catch a carp, they said, and fortunately this doesn't happen too often.

Joe caught a carp while I was there, and it was thrilling to watch the struggle-to-the-death between mand and beast there on the edge of the Potomac. (As a matter of fact Joe just hauled the carp in with one hand while lighting his pipe with the other, but we District-girdlers have to say it that way. It's supposed to sound better.) The carp wasn't very interesting-looking, having a very low forehead. So did Joe, for that matter.

Relentlessly pushing on up the Potomac, I passed the Gutzon Borglum statue of William Jennings Bryan, which looks as if Bryan were scratching the back of his head, and on past the Titanic Memorial toward Georgetown.

The next characters encountered were some men with shovels, working on a project to grade the riverfront down to the wall. The only interesting one was a man who leaned his stomach against the end of a short shovel while making listless shoveling motions with another shovel. I asked about him.

"That's Two-Shovel Sam," said my informant. "He's the notworkingest man on this here whole project."

Sam beamed proudly.

Feeling faint after these arduous encounters, I turned into a Georgetown cafe for some lunch. I asked the proprietor if he knew any odd characters. Speaking in the old argot of this territory, he said:

"Baby, I know a pip! There's a guy comes in here every day and whatta ya think he has for lunch? Y' couldn't guess! Honest-to-John, he has a maple pecan sundae and three slugs of rye whisky! Sometimes I don't even believe it myself. This guy has a what-d'ya-call-it—a 'theery'—or something—that the maple pecan sundae makes the best base in his stomach for the rye. How's that?"

I said it was very good, as in fact this is the very kind of character that all girdlers—District or globe—always meet.

Noting that workmen are tearing down the little old house where Francis Scott Key wrote "The Star-Spangled Banner," near the Key Bridge, I passed on in the grim 30-odd-mile push around the District, along the peaceful old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, to Chain Bridge, and into the first real difficulty.

Here the District Line cuts back from its southwest corner to shoot northeast. It does this in an impenetrable mess of woods, where I encountered a new and very sticky kind of burrs and a rather surly peasant, who was asleep under a tree and seemed pretty sore when I awoke him to ask him where the District line was. He wasn't at all helpful, just mumbling, "Go away!" several times.

Water Hazard.

The District line, after passing through the backyard of a Mrs. Jones' house—she wasn't in—climbs a hill which reminded me of the Matterhorn, cuts through some flower beds in back of the administration building of the Dalecarlia Reservoir and plunges directly across it. This was very sticky going, and after circling the reservoir I didn't pick it up again until it emerged in the backyard of the home of Felix Morley, The Post's editor, at Westmoreland circle and Massachusetts avenue. Competitors will find this yard barred to them by our special arrangement with Mr. Morley.

From then on it was easy sailing, except for the crossing of Wisconsin avenue, easily the biggest hazard of the day. On past Connecticut avenue, past Utah avenue and up to Rock Creek Park, where the line ends directly in a tree where somebody had abandoned a blue serge coat.

Fearing that this meant a desperate competitor ahead I plunged recklessly forward across the park and up to the northeast corner, where the line touches Silver Spring boulevard, turned to the right, passed the Blair portal, where Sixteenth street meets Maryland, and swerved up Eastern avenue to Georgia avenue, where I stopped for a coke and lemon, nearly exhausted by the terrific grind.

From this point on until the line disappeared in to the hole where I am spending the night, it was touch and go with the line, which follows Eastern avenue.

The only trouble with this is that Eastern avenue doesn't follow anything, and disappears at irregular intervals into people's front yards, some of whom were a shade crusty at the idea of District girdling, not having the true scientific spirit.

Tracking the evasive line doggedly through the home of Mrs. Mattoon, of Cedar street, across Maple street, through a group of small boys playing football with a stuffed hat and past a little girl rather sadistically choking her Teddy Bear, I plowed forward until Eastern avenue dispiritedly vanished in a dump a few blocks from New Hampshire avenue northeast.

From this point on, all is black. District girdlers who pursue The Post's trail-blazing may be able to find a route across the jungle that lies between New Hampshire avenue and Sargent road, but this correspondent, without taking to the air, is baffled. I may even cheat two miles of this area unless somebody comes along pretty soon with some nice chewy pemmican.

(Editor's note—We are afraid there will be more of these.)

Similar situations exist in other buildings.

After an inspection of the Veterans' Administration elevators, John A. Dickinson, mechanical engineer of the Bureau of Standards, reported he had observed the elevators so heavily overloaded even their safety brakes could not have held them if they slipped, and added:

"Such conditions would not be permitted to exist in buildings under private ownership. They would be shut down by the inspector of buildings. It is most unfortunate that elevators in Government-owned and operated buildings should offer greater hazards than those in privately owned structures. Obviously, they should be safer."

In an appeal for funds with which to replace the Veterans' Administration elevators, the National Parks Service reported:

"Since the equipment is only designed for a 10 per cent overload, and since at times these elevators are 30 to 40 per cent overloaded, some failure of the operating mechanism may require the safeties to function, and they, in turn, may fail through overloading, causing the elevator to fall, with probable loss of life."

It is under these conditions that the Veterans' Bureau elevators will operate until January 1, Mulvehill said, when installation of new lifts will be completed. Contracts totaling $329,819 for installation of new elevators were let this week, Mulvehill said.

Congress set aside $700,000 in the first deficiency bill for installation of new elevators, Mulvehill pointed out.

"We are preparing the contracts for the new elevator installations as fast as we can," Mulvehill said. "When the new elevators are installed next year we will have eliminated the gravest dangers, but we will still be confronted with the problem of overloading of obsolete lifts."

The District government lends an elevator inspector to the Federal Government to pass on lifts in Government buildings.

James Brown, operator of the Resettlement Administration elevator, reported that 14 persons crowded into the car on the ninth floor. The lift gained momentum as it dropped downward and Brown tried to bring it to a stop at the fourth floor. Nothing happened.

Liberal Brand Of Socialism Hailed by Peer

communism, is a negligible factor," he replied. "Really, the only way they can get into the newspapers is to stage a street brawl. The Fascist Party has no representation in the Commons; the Communists have only one—Gallacher, from Fife. No one takes either faction very seriously, and the only section they can inflame is the emotional East End (London) quarter."

Queried as to what the Utopia of workable government might be, Lord Lothian replied:

"That's the rub. One hundred and fifty years ago America gave a challenge to the world, based on democratic principles, free initiative and property right. It took 100 years to work that theory out, and now it is face to face with the new concept — socialism. That theory of government holds that property must function for the benefit of all. To find an answer to both challenges is now the burning question."

Reminded that he had spoken of liberal socialism is an answer, the Marquess of Lothian emphatically replied:

"Yes. But so far it has not been found. When I speak of liberal socialism I mean a concept of government — not yet worked out—that will unite the best features of socialism with all the tenents of democracy."

Has British prestige waned since the conquest of Ethiopia?

"League prestige has," he replied. "Sanctions should never have been invoked without determination to resort to arms. England, of course, had to live up to the letter of the covenant just as America did some years ago when there was aggression in the Far East. But America did not land Marines to back up her stern note and England never contemplated using military sanctions against the Fascists.

"You must remember that Europe is not a union of federated states. Europe is 26 states, each with a consciousness of national sovereignty. And that in itself is the fundamental cause of war.

"Can you blame us in England, if we are now determined to defend our heritage against possible gangster attacks from without?"

Questioned about the political parties and their present fortune in England, the Marquess replied:

"The Liberal Party, to which I belong, is, of course, not very active. The World War undermined liberalism and it is now on the decline. Even in the days of the coalition cabinet, when England was at war with the Central Powers, the Liberal Party was split on the question of support for the then prime minister, Lloyd George.

"At present the feeling in England is, with respect to the present national government, that Stanley Baldwin will leave 10 Downing street after the King's coronation."

The marquess feels that the Labor Party will take control then, unless the troubled continent sees a renewal of bitter strife.

"Regardless of the future, though, I will add that the Labor Party in England will inevitably come to power," Lord Lothian said.

Stating that unemployment was on the decline in England—the roll of jobless now records 1,500,000 names—Lothian explained that the means test which caused such bitterness was merely a question of administration.

"Some feel that relatives should be compelled to support their less fortunate kin," he said. Others feel that this would work an unnecessary hardship on more numbers. There must of course be some means to prevent aid being given those who, though jobless, have other means of support. All that hubbub was merely 'good politics' with rival politicians currying vote favors from the unemployed."

The eleventh Marquess of Lothian, who has been secretary to the Rhodes Trust since 1925, had a word of encouragement for our young students who seek scholastic laurel crowns abroad.

"Of last year's American Rhodes scholar group," he said, "81 per cent passed their final examination with first or second class honors. That was 2 per cent higher than the British equivalent. The Americans also did very well in athletics and proved themselves to be really excellent types of men."

U. S. Radio Bars Aliens.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 14 (AP).—Uncle Sam threw a radio barrier along the shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario today to keep out smuggled aliens. The immigration service put into operation a new shortwave station, WWMB, which will communicate with 11 scout cars and direct them to the scene of any reported efforts by aliens to enter the country illegally.

mum and urgent measure against violation of the nonintervention agreement in Spanish affairs, this agreement not only will not serve its purpose but acts as a camouflage for the insurgents against the legal Spanish government.

"I have the honor to ask you that the above proposals will be discussed at the next meeting of the committee which I urgently ask you to convene without delay."

According to a usually trustworthy source, Portugal informed Lord Plymouth she was willing to accept Russia's first proposal, made October 6, for dispatch of an impartial mission to the Spanish-Portuguese frontier to investigate alleged violations of the neutrality pact, providing a similar mission conducts analogous inquiries in Barcelona, Valencia and Alicante, loyalist seaports.

The Portuguese proposal was expected to be an important topic at the next meeting of the committee.

Nazis Assail Russia.

Berlin, Oct. 14 (AP).—Renewed anti-Bolshevist tirades in the German press tonight followed reports of Moscow's latest drive for "practical measures" against arms shipments to the Spanish insurgents.

Belgium Strengthens Army.

Brussels, Oct. 14 (U.P.).—King Leopold, warning that rearmament by European nations was a threat to Belgium, tonight increased the term for compulsory military service to 18 months.

Communists Blamed.

Paris, Oct. 14 (AP).—Germany's protest over an alleged French "insult" to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler led tonight to Rightist charges that Russian Communists were trying to provoke Franco-German strife.

The Rightist accusations, voiced by the newspaper Figaro, came with the disclosure of the secret presence in Paris of Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, since Monday.

"Moscow's emissary is not indifferent to the incidents provoked by Thorez' speech at Strasbourg," the newspaper said, referring to statements made by Maurice Thorez, secretary general of the French Communist Party, which allegedly insulted Hitler.

"Everyone knows the Comintern (Soviet Communist International) has been trying for the past several months to arouse the bellicose instincts of French Communists," Figaro said.

The newspaper asserted the Soviet strategy was calculated to throw France against Germany so that Russia would not be left alone to face "any eventual German attack."

Arms Plot Laid to Rightists.

As the French cabinet met amid these charges of a Russian "plot," Socialist Premier Leon Blum's own newspaper, Le Populaire, asserted that Col. Francois de la Rocque had cached at least 1,000 German and American-made automatic rifles, machine-guns and tear gas bombs to arm the "shock brigades" of the disbanded Croix de Feu.

Blum's newspaper accused de la Rocque of plotting a "Putsch" to bring into power by violence "an ideal which is repugnant to a majority of the French."

Some American sub-machine guns, the newspaper said, were among the arms smuggled into France across the Swiss and Belgian borders.

There's a reason...
Many of our customers have repeatedly remarked about the fact that our store is always busy. Naturally there is a reason for this. It is true that we sell the same products at the same price as many other stores. We also sell many popular whiskies which bear our own name. These CLARK BRANDS have brought many new friends to our store who appreciate quality whiskies at a moderate price. There is another reason also, it is simply this: When a person enters our store he receives more than the product which he buys. He receives courteous service and helpful suggestions.

Supreme Court Review.

The Supreme Court's refusal to review its decision invalidating New York's minimum-wage law for women occasioned no surprise. The highest tribunal could scarcely be expected to reverse its attitude because its judgment on that particular case as presented proved to be universally disconcerting. And there could be no point in reviewing the case unless the court were prepared to modify its opinion.

It is well to remember, however, that decisions of the Supreme Court apply only to the cases in which they are rendered. When the court reviews the case involving the minimum-wage law in the State of Washington its attitude will doubtless be clarified. And it may be found that the interpretation placed upon the opinion in the New York case was too broad. But whatever the outcome here it would obviously be undesirable for the court to set a precedent of changing its opinions merely because they may happen to prove unpopular.

Too many critics of the court persist in regarding it as a sort of super-legislative chamber. It is true, of course, that the justices who decide these cases must interpret the Constitution and the law when both may be obscure on the point at issue. In this they are not infallible. But there is not the slightest indication that any of them ever attempt to impose their own will or their own prejudices upon the people. Each opinion may be safely regarded as a conscientious effort to apply the fundamental law, as the justices understand it, to the facts of a specific case.

If such decisions are contrary to the popular will, then it is clearly up to the people to modify the Constitution through the procedure which it provides for that purpose. In this instance there is every reason to believe that the public would strongly support an amendment giving the States unquestioned authority to control minimum wages for women and children. But proposal of such an amendment may well await further elucidation from the court. Opinions sometimes turn upon technicalities that can be avoided in drafting legislation, without seeking constitutional amendments. The traditional American policy is to wait until the change is clearly desirable for the public welfare, and then present it for popular confirmation.

Training To Fight Crime.

In many respects it is unfortunate that the so-called G-men have come to be regarded as glamorous sleuths whose chief business is to track down notorious gunmen. That idea originated in the unusual success of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in dealing with the Dillinger and other gangs at the inception of its expanded law-enforcement program. But it doesn't give a realistic picture of the scientific, anti-crime agency developed by J. Edgar Hoover.

The arrest and confession of William S. Herndon, who absconded with $2,500 from the Georgetown Branch of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association, of which he was manager, is a good example of the routine work the F. B. I. is doing. Since the kidnap racket has been stamped out, temporarily at least, and the worst interstate gangs have been broken up, the work of the G-men is likely to be more and more restricted to unspectacular but nonetheless important cases of this sort.

A still better example of the excellent work this agency is doing may be seen in the recent graduation of the third class of law-enforcement officials to attend its National Police Academy. Eighty-one men, selected from local, county and State police forces, have now completed the F. B. I. course of instruction. That may appear a relatively small achievement, but it should be remembered that these new experts in the science of detecting criminals carry the information obtained in Washington to all members of their home forces. In this way instruction will be given to more than 52,000 law-enforcement officers.

Alumni of this training school have now formed an association with the object of continuing their contact with the F. B. I. A research committee will study and develop law-enforcement technique. The findings and advice of this group will be available to the bureau as well as to 81 police departments. It is worthy of note that 90 per cent of the officers identified with the "academy" have already been promoted within their respective law-enforcement agencies.

The significance of these developments is that for the first time men are being trained in a national center to combat crime intelligently and systematically. The facilities as well as the technique of the F. B. I. are thus made available to all parts of the country. A long step forward in the struggle against crime may be safely anticipated.

Not So Comic After All.

By an interesting coincidence the same day this week saw President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon discussing the issue of centralization of governmental powers, probably the most fundamentally important of all the issues which are joined in this campaign. The approach of the two candidates to the problem, and the manner in which they separately chose to treat it, is one of the best indications to date of the tremendous difference in the philosophy of government espoused by the leaders of the present Democratic and the present Republican parties.

On Tuesday forenoon, in Wichita, Mr. Roosevelt had a good time laughing at the "whispering ghosts and stalking bogy men" by means of which "the Republican leaders" are trying to instill a "silly false fear" into the minds of the electorate. The context made abundantly clear that he was referring to the widespread criticism of the way the New Deal has exalted the power of the Federal Executive at the expense both of local self-government and of legislative independence. After mentioning a number of the new projects, both important and trivial, to which his Administration has turned its hand, the President concluded that "we have not changed our form of government."

On Tuesday night, in Detroit, Gov. Landon, using very earnest and serious language, took up the same subject. He discussed the rise of dictatorships in many countries which, until a few years ago, seemed as confirmed in their faith in democracy as is the United States. And he pointed out that in every case the disintegration of the democratic form of government has followed the same pattern:

> First, the executive sets himself up as a popular leader and, in the name of national emergency, asks that additional authority be given to him. Then, the legislature gradually yields more and more power to the executive, until the legislature becomes a mere instrument of the executive. Finally, the courts of law are undermined, and the judiciary ceases to be a protection for the people. When this final stage is reached . . . the executive is all powerful.

Mr. Roosevelt is of course technically correct in saying that as yet "we have not changed our form of government," though he omitted the tribute to the Supreme Court which would have been graceful in this connection. But Mr. Landon is certainly equally correct in saying that "we in America cannot ignore these warnings" from abroad. And the trend of Mr. Roosevelt's highly personal government, as he outlines it himself, is unquestionably in close accord with the pattern of the downfall of democracies, as cogently summarized by Mr. Landon.

No more is necessary to justify the conclusion that President Roosevelt shows disgraceful levity in dismissing criticism of his underlying policy as material for "a very amusing chapter" of "political bedtime stories." The issue of the preservation of the American form of government is serious, not amusing. And even the faintest recollection of the self-sacrifice which went to its establishment, development and preservation, should restrain any citizen from attempting to make fun of those who express reasoned concern as to the perpetuation of the Federal system.

It is permissible to assert that the fears voiced by Mr. Landon are exaggerated. It is permissible to argue that modern conditions require the sort of centralization for which the New Deal has worked unceasingly. But it is certainly not permissible to laugh off the very widespread doubts as to the all-encompassing wisdom of Mr. Roosevelt, and to characterize them as "bedtime stories" designed "to spread the gospel of fear."

The President's pleasant whimsies and light-hearted phantasies have been of great service to the American people. During the depths of the depression there was much to be said for a leader who refused to worry, perhaps because he did not understand how much there was to worry about. But there is a very definite limit to the virtue of the comic treatment of serious subjects. And history does not record that any of our great Presidents were distinguished for their facility in wisecracking on fundamental national issues.

Accepting Responsibility

The Maritime Commission has intervened to prevent a tie-up of Pacific Coast shipping by strengthening its appeals to both sides to prolong the provisional truce proclaimed two weeks ago, when agreements between the operators and the unions expired. Moreover, Admiral Hamlet is now on his way to San Francisco to take charge of an investigation for the Commission, which declares its intention to "use to the fullest extent its power and authority, both legal and moral," to prevent a tie-up. This statement sets at rest all doubts as to the willingness of the newly constituted body to assume a responsibility that so plainly devolves upon it in the absence of any other Federal agency equipped to play a major part in settling the dispute.

It is true that under the merchant marine act of 1936 the commission is not given specific power to deal with the present labor troubles on the West Coast. But among the many powers conferred upon the commission it is charged with studying labor conditions and fixing minimum wages and manning requirements on vessels qualifying for operating subsidies. This as a matter of course gives it great influence over the terms of contracts negotiated by shipowners with unions of longshoremen as well as seamen.

If it had been content to interpret its duties in strict accordance with the law, the Maritime Commission might have washed its hands of all responsibility for the possible paralysis of West Coast shipping. It could have said, for instance, that it is not yet fully or permanently organized. In acknowledging a moral obligation to avert the threatened disaster, the commission is acting in a way to increase its prestige. It is strengthening confidence in its ability to deal effectively with the many difficult problems which it is legally bound to confront in the near future.

The Constitution Issue.

Norman Thomas pointed out recently that the foremost issue of the campaign can scarcely be the New Deal, since so large a part of it has been wrecked on the shoals of unconstitutionality. In his address at Detroit, Gov. Landon followed a similar line of thought. His challenge to President Roosevelt to reveal whatever plans he may have to amend the Constitution, or to evade Supreme Court decisions, exposes one of the weakest points in the Administration's case as presented thus far.

The invalidation of NRA, AAA, the Guffey coal act and various other control measures sponsored by the Administration is now history. So far as the public welfare is concerned, nothing can be gained by either condoning or condemning these unconstitutional ventures. The important question now is: What course will the President pursue in event of his re-election?

There is good reason for Mr. Landon to ask what, if any, constitutional amendments the President has in mind. Will he resort to further stop-gap measures, such as the soil conservation act, attempting to place them beyond the pale of judicial review? Will he strike directly at the power of the Supreme Court? Or will he abandon those objectives that have been clearly proved to be unconstitutional as the organic law now stands?

To each of these queries the public is entitled to a clear and unequivocal reply. Continued silence, as Gov. Landon suggests, will place Mr. Roosevelt in the position of "attempting to dodge the fundamental issue of this campaign—the issue of whether he intends to change the form of our Government—whether labor, agriculture and business are to be directed and managed by Government—directed and managed by politics."

In his Denver speech the President pledged himself to "action that is saving and will continue to save the constitutional representative form of government in which we rejoice." Yet his speeches have been interspersed with praise for the New Deal's invalidated measures almost as though they represented the acme of constitutional government. That attitude may be merely political showmanship. Yet it inevitably causes people to ask what liberties the President might take with the organic law if granted a second term in the White House.

It is a grave mistake to assume that the Supreme Court is capable of protecting the Constitution against possible abuses of this sort. Acts that are clearly repugnant to the spirit and letter of the basic law can be drawn so that they may never be judicially tested. Even measures subjected to judicial review may be enforced for several years before their unconstitutionality can be proved in the highest tribunal, as is now indicated by the confusion over processing taxes paid to manufacturers but never collected by the Treasury.

The trouble about telling a lie is that it invariably runs into a continued story.

Many an old maid wishes she had married before she was old enough to know better.

War clouds have no silver lining.

Rural Life Culture.

From the Omaha World Herald.

It may be accepted as a self-evident truth that a farmer who goes to a meeting of his local co-operative in top hat, white tie and tails is not a peasant. On the other hand, it can hardly be seriously contended that this sartorial extremity is a sine qua non of a cultured rural life. The farmer and his wife don't have to doll up like Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in order to prove that they aren't peasants.

Mrs. Maud E. Nuquist says farmers dress like that in Denmark. But she mentions it to illustrate a point, we take it, rather than to suggest it as a custom to be adopted by the Nebraska farmer. The point she is making is the desirability of community activity to promote the cultural arts and social graces as a means of escape from a tendency toward a peasant way of life.

A great deal has been said about the threat to American agriculture of degeneration into peasantry. But that problem is recognized as an economic rather than a cultural one. Given the opportunity to maintain a comfortable standard of living in reasonable security, the farmer will not neglect the cultural and social amenities which go with it.

Rural life, it seems to us, is naturally less formal, more democratic than urban life, but not for that reason lacking in those qualities which make for a worth-while culture. Where rough edges remain, they tend to be worked smooth by time. There is a continuous striving to achieve greater attractiveness in the farm home and the farm premises without trading comfort for artificiality. And the standard of education constantly arises. Illiteracy is virtually nonexistent, and the proportion of high school graduates attracted by farming as a way of life grows steadily greater.

Local Medical Centers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I should like to take this opportunity of commenting upon the importance of the recent change of attitude expressed by the District Medical Society toward Dr. Ruhland's proposed "medical centers."

At the budget hearings held before the Commissioners last month, Dr. Hooe appeared for the Medical Society and stated that he based his opposition to the erection of the two new medical centers requested by Dr. Ruhland of the Health Department, upon the grounds that the $500,000 necessary to build these medical centers could be more economically spent for adequate equipment and personnel in existing medical facilities.

This was shown to be the true state of affairs in the District's hospital when the annual report of Dr. Bocock, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, was made public shortly after the hearings. In the report, he showed that so acute had the conditions become in the hospital that in many instances, due to lack of equipment and sufficient nurses, it had become impossible to carry out the orders left by visiting nurses. He likewise advocated the building of a clinic in connection with the hospital itself.

The fact that these conditions have not as yet been remedied did not deter the Medical Society at its recent meeting from reversing its stand and coming out in favor of the building of these costly medical centers. It even went further, in order to justify its position, and proceeded to attack the administration of Gallinger Hospital by issuing the following statement: "The fact that the care of indigent patients at Gallinger Hospital is rendered to an extent futile by lack of sufficient co-operation or adequate full-time personnel was deplored."

It is my impression that instead of advocating the building of new medical centers, the Medical Society could well confine itself to advocating that existing facilities be adequately staffed.

Norris, Of Nebraska.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Neither directly nor indirectly has Senator George W. Norris ever sought support in his campaigns. The local effort to this end is not undertaken in his name. It is rather in the name and for the sake of the principles for which he stands and the causes that need his services.

Senator Norris is running as an independent. William Allen White is supporting the Republican candidate for President. In a recent editorial on Senator Norris Mr. White says: "He towers head, shoulders and torso above any of his rival candidates * * * He has followed his conscience and he has asked no favors in return for his support. His 30 years' achievement in Washington has proved that he is a major statesman in his country's history. * * * Norris should be supported and elected. This is unorthodox Republicanism. * * * These are the views of the Gazette. And so what?"

Powerful political and financial forces are arrayed against Senator Norris. They have spread misinformation and misrepresentation among the voters of Nebraska.

Mr. Ickes' Contribution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Another dud, is just all that Secretary Ickes' radio speech at Columbus, Ohio, was. With some degree of excited expectation I again awaited another promised and much heralded great expose by Secretary Ickes, just as I waited with excited expectation three weeks ago the long proclaimed and widely advertised promise of a great expose of inside information about a political bargain or control of some kind, of Hearst "over Landon," which also turned out to be nothing at all but just another Ickes dud.

If Secretary Ickes, who writes himself up in the Congressional Directory now as "of Hayes Manor, Manor road, Chevy Chase," and who in the 1932 "Who's Who" related a long list of political Republican activities that never led even to an appointive office, had called attention to the present Hearst control over radio here in Washington, apparently through the White House, he would have really furnished the public with some information.

He would not have exposed his ignorance so much if he had not called Gov. Landon inexperienced and unqualified by service for the Presidency. Not only in politics has Gov. Landon won his spurs, in contrast to Ickes, but in the World War he served in the ranks and did real service. P. H. JAMES.

Replacing Bonds By Bonds.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Mr. T. R. Edmiston, in a letter in The Post of October 13, accuses Gov. Landon of deliberate false statement for debunking Mr. Roosevelt's suave assurance that the bonus was "out of the way." He seems to have absorbed the idea the master of the blank-check finance was at pains to put across.

If, as Mr. Edmiston correctly states, bonus bonds were cashed by the Treasury and postoffices, the question is, what with? Funds conjured out of the salvaged silk topper that drifted with the tide when the "nice old gentleman" fell off the pier? Or some new legerdemain with the dollar, attributable to peculiar New Deal genius? Or from March and June income tax funds in the Treasury; from funds since floated by the Treasury and taken up by our old friends, the national banks, insurance companies and a few industrial royalists.

Naturally every bond cashed will have to be replaced dollar for dollar by new Federal borrowings. Replacement bonds not being labeled bonus bonds, we are asked to delude ourselves into the belief that this obligation has magically developed wings and taken flight.

Mr. Landon may have fumbled his Cheddar cheese prices, but the natural charity inherent in the heart of every true American will allow each candidate a few minor slips. But Landon was 100 per cent right on the bonus accusation. Possibly the grand spectacle of New Deal failures, and brazen efforts to explain them in glossy campaign speeches, put the challenger in mind of cheese. Not the Canadian brand but the current political variety.

In Behalf Of Cats.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been grateful to read recently in The Post the touching story about the services at the dog cemetery, as well as other sympathetic dog stories. Increasing regard for dependent domestic animals marks the upward path of the civilized human being and I now desire to put in a plea for greater protection and care for cats as well as for dogs.

Returning to Washington from a summer's absence I am dismayed to learn that all of the cats have been eliminated from the public markets. Surely this is a mistake, for any food center will soon be overrun with rats unless cats are on the job.

Among conspicuous cat lovers in our own country was that most virile, the gentle, great American, Mark Twain. He referred to them in extravagant praise, writing. "I simply cannot resist a cat, all cats. They are the most fascinating, the most intelligent, the most affectionate, as well as the daintiest and most graceful of all creatures."

Landon On Dictatorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The most astounding thing in my estimation about the campagn of Alfred Mossman Landon is the inconsistency with which he approaches his plans and promises for the future. If one only studies the principles for which he now stands with the doctrines which he expounded two or three years ago, the difference between Candidate Landon and Gov. Landon will be easily discernable. Time and again during his State administration as Governor, he has praised the activities of the New Deal. Today he criticizes those very measures.

I don't believe the average intelligent person thinks of Mr. Roosevelt as a dictator or that he has any such designs, but Mr. Landon would make you think so if possible. He has warned against the possibilities of dictatorship and war and yet himself in 1933 said the following: "The makers of the Constitution realized that in a great emergency the country couldn't conduct business with a debating society."

In a letter to Secretary Ickes on July 17, 1933, he said in reference to the crisis in the oil industry: "Federal control under the present act is our only hope and if we are to be protected it will be necessary for a dictator to exercise authority in the premises and fix allotments to States, also pools within States, also storage withdrawal and imports."

He has criticized the NRA, the AAA and other measures as unconstitutional stating that such procedures tend to dissolve the preservation of our liberties. He forgets about the eight bills declared unconstitutional by the Kansas Supreme Court during his administration, two of which were farm bills.

Clerical Demagogues.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Recently, both in the political and philosophical arenas, we have been forced to listen to the worst barrage of contemporary drivel that has ever come over the air or out of a newspaper. I refer to the learned remarks of certain clerical demagogues who pretend to speak for God, and man, and justice in the same breath, and who do not mean a word they say, unless it is their defense of fascism.

In the name of a so-called "free press" we have had to listen to this claptrap without being able to reply to these ranters who are engaged in "defending nonsense by violence," and abusing the rights of democracy as much as they can.

Today these religious miscreants are howling that Spain and Mexico and Russia are persecuting the church and driving God from the land. These same religionists who cry for sympathy, are guilty of the most vicious examples of class and racial prejudice, and are forced by wealthy members of their congregations to tell the people deliberate falsehoods.

In the name of Christianity these clerical demagogues exploit the poor peasants and rob the wealth of the land, and cry for sympathy when the people in justified anger turn against them. In the name of decency the press should report also the side of the people as well as the side of the clerical-fascist minority.

A Depositor's Plea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I am wondering why the delay on the part of receivers of the District National and Federal American banks in paying further dividends.

If the Government showed as much interest in the cause of the long suffering and outraged depositors of these banks as it evinces in rushing unearned and undeserved political checks to the farmers of the country, they would long have been paid in full.

Not all of these depositors live in voteless Washington. Many will doubtless remember on November 3 the kind of treatment they have been and are now receiving. We are entitled to more decent treatment. FRANK JOHNSON.

Washington Shopping Memories.

IN advertising an annual anniversary sale recently one of the large Washington department store owners said that in his early days Mr. Lansburgh had been able to stand at the front door and greet all his customers personally. That must have been some 60 or 70 years ago. The writer is not old enough to remember Mr. Lansburgh standing at the door and yet she, too, can remember Washington department stores of a generation ago in a way that seems to put them in another era.

When I was young, ready-made clothing for women and children was far too expensive for the family of a government clerk. My mother was very expert at home sewing, making everything for herself, my sister and me, and even for my brothers when small. So I was brought up hearing that Lansburgh's was the best in town for yard goods and it was a delight to go with mother on a shopping expedition to that store.

The department for materials by the yard was on the ground floor, at the back of the store a few steps up from the front section. I can remember well walking up those steps and wandering around the counters behind which were the many bolts of colored materials, while mother sat down to discuss quality, quantity and prices with the clerks. I can remember, when I shut my eyes, the delicious smell of new cotton material.

WE must have visited several other departments of Lansburgh's, for the end of every shopping tour was always by a large counter almost under the main stairway leading to the upper floors. Those broad stairs with wooden banisters were more like the stairs in a large private house and the counter was tucked away under them.

It was presided over by a Mr. Ardella, who knew my mother well because of her constant patronage. I had some vague idea that Mr. Ardella was the head of the store because it was from him that my mother collected all her small packages and looked over the total shopping.

I can see Mr. Ardella now—baldish, blond, long nosed and rather sour on the world in general, but very accommodating and willing to serve us in a gruff way. He would growl and expostulate over any mistakes made in the articles sent down and then comment on the weather and the general trend of the times. At first I was scared of him and thought he was angry with my mother, but she assured me he was really helping her.

I CAN recall visits to Kann's, where my mother would replenish her kitchen furnishings. In the Annex were many canaries, which appealed to my sympathies, but my mother was more interested in clothes baskets or ironing boards, and never bought canaries. The great novelty at Kann's was the electric stairway. That escalator was not much like the bright, smoothly running ones my little boys love so at Hecht's, but it was a forerunner and made our eyes wide with wonder.

When we came home from Kann's my father loved to crack the old joke: "Well, what did you see downtown today?" he would ask. "Did you see women coming out of Kann's and men going into Saks'?" Only half that joke would do today.

PERHAPS even dearer to my heart were expeditions downtown with my maiden aunt. Compared to my mother's utilitarian purchases my aunt's errands always seemed glamorous. I imagine I was impressed by her attention to personal articles and feminine fancies such as mother had little time to indulge in.

My aunt's favorite store was Woodward & Lothrop. In those days the main entrance was at the very corner of 11th and F streets and the favorite meeting place was a big mezzanine balcony about in the middle of the store, I believe, but certainly not far from that F street corner. All the world seemed to meet there and I loved to sit close to the fancy wooden balustrade and watch the coming and going below. There was a perfect network of wires and tubes all over the place for the little automatic carriers that ran back and forth taking bills and returning the change. The glove counter was just under the balcony and I used to be fond of watching the grand ladies being fitted.

The big treat of the day with my aunt was to have lunch at Woodward's. The lunch room of those days was nothing like as elegant and spacious as it is today but to me it was the most exciting place to eat. It provided my first experience with a public restaurant.

MY mother and my aunt are gone now. I am a mother and an aunt myself. I have lived in many cities and traveled far, but now I'm back home, I fall naturally into the old grooves.

I take my daughters downtown, and nieces, too, when they visit me. I wonder if they are unconsciously storing away memories of a Washington that will be again changed when they are grown. It is said that Washington is a city of transients, that nobody ever stays here and that families are not carried on from generation to generation. But I was born here, of parents who were both born here. I jot down these recollections because the chance wording of an advertisement has stirred memories of a time not really very long ago, and yet already so out of date.

Runyon Overboard!

I declare men, this here's getting serious.

One day we find old Henry Mencken gone Republican and gibbering in the unknown tongues and today we pick up the paper and what do we read there? Well, we read old Damon Runyon's column and we catch him writing about purple bougainvilleas and scarlet hibiscuses crawling over garden walls and roses and gardenias and gladioli growing in green yards. We catch him writing about velvet moon glow and the murmur of evening, a fat chicken frying on the stove and biscuits in the oven, and peace and carpet slippers in a white and quiet room.

Men, do you reckon this thing is catching, because that's two good men down already, and only a little while ago I saw old Prof. Will McCarney, the prize fight manager, walking down the street carrying a book that should have wheels under it. Ain't there any way to bar the door against such things? Ain't there something you can spray over a man or a jab into his arm? No vaccination? No nothing, but just let them go wrong?

• • • •

I was more or less prepared for Henry Mencken, because prohibition was the very breath of life to him, and when they lawed prohibition away they left him just a hollow shell. He might as well be Republican as anything else, what's left of him now. But Mr. Runyon was different. Boy and man, I have known Mr. Runyon for rising 20 years, and though I knew he was a soft touch for sad music and private woes, I never expected to see him in overalls and sunbonnet down on his knees stirring up the roots of his gladioli and red hibiscuses along his garden wall.

Most of the time when I was knowing Mr. Runyon he was living at the Forrest Hotel, just off Broadway, and his quarters in the Forrest were the town pump for the most fascinating collection of odd, or anyway uneven, characters that you could find this side of Ossining-on-Hudson. Mr. Runyon's quarters were the laboratory in which he studied the Broadway wild life which he wrote about in his hoodlum fiction. They all seemed to have the key to Damon Runyon's off-the-street club. Anyway, they were always just walking in and ordering something to eat and calling up people on his phone.

• • • •

Then there was always some hungry heavyweight sitting in the big, fat chair in the corner, squinting down the street at the clock to see if it was time to eat yet. It wasn't always the same heavyweight, but it was always some heavyweight. Sometimes it would be an old, gnarly heavyweight with a dried apple ear and a husky voice from getting punched in the neck. Sometimes it would be a young pink one with the dumb, polite expression that young heavyweights have.

Mrs. Runyon had pretty heavy hauling to get Mr. Runyon moved out of the Forrest Hotel, but she finally got him into an apartment somewhere way up in the suburbs—up around Fifty-ninth street, I heard, although Damon seemed ashamed of this and wouldn't ever tell guys where he lived.

"Up yonder way," he would say. "Up the street a piece."

Mrs. Runyon said she had to get him out of there to get him loose from those heavyweights of his.

"We always had a heavyweight around," she said, "and the way those heavies eat you'd never know until you start to lift the tab for a little snack. . . . Break your back. Up the country where we live now, up around Fifty-ninth street, they don't pester us any more."

• • • •

Of course, Mr. Runyon often wrote very tender prose about sentimental subjects, but mostly he wrote down in the bass notes on his typewriter about heavies and hoodlums and guys that got snatched and joints that got sneezed and nobody in our set ever reckoned to see him in overalls and sunbonnet, and down on his knees with a trowel setting out petunias in his lovely little garden in Miami Beach. Much less that he would ever come right out in the open and do a piece about it.

Mr. Runyon was a very hard-talking man when he was himself. Talking about hunting once, I said I would never shoot a deer—too pretty.

"Nah," Mr. Runyon said. "Me, neither. I wouldn't never shoot me no deer. But ducks, though. I'll shoot ducks. I hate ducks."

Another time he said another fellow—a certain party, if you insist—was around town with his old lady.

"His old lady," I exclaimed. "The sick one? I thought she was bed-ridden."

"Nah," Mr. Runyon said. "Nah, not the sick one. This is a big, beefy old lady, built like a wrestler. Sound of wind and limb. He had to divorce that sick one. Doctor bills and nurses and specialists all the time. Kept him broke for ten years."

And now it is purple bougainvillea and scarlet hibiscus and the velvet moon glow. Man overboard! Sling him an anvil, men!

The College Dormitory Trailer.

College students are now bringing their dormitories with them. At the University of Georgia several members of the freshman class are living in trailers. From quadrangle to flivver-bungalow in one semester.

• • • •

The boys showed up by trailer, and when outside the classrooms are spending their bright college years in it.

• • • •

News that the college fraternity buildings have been abandoned for secret meeting places in the tourist camps will now surprise nobody.

• • • •

The collegiate trailer done in the college colors, with built-in bar, nonshatterable bookcases and complete equipment, including saxophone, mandolin, radio and necking compartment, may appear any moment.

• • • •

The innovation of the 1936 automobile show may be the university dormitory, f. o. b. Detroit.

• • • •

A student may not get by in trigonometry, philosophy and Greek, but he will learn all there is to know about elementary housekeeping and advanced map reading.

• • • •

Travel is an education in itself, they say, and the trailer situation affords a boy a chance to go highbrow by the gasoline station route.

• • • •

The American university of a decade hence may resemble a combination tourist camp, wayside rotisserie and tin can tourist convention.

• • • •

It is even possible that when our Herbie goes forth to college the whole family will go along with him completely equipped and provisioned for the four-year course.

• • • •

The next thing in order may be streamlined education direct from Detroit and in any color you wish.

• • • •

And if it doesn't get you anywhere maybe you can turn it in and get an allowance on a new course of instruction.

• • • •

Can You Remember——

Away back when "Bring 'em back alive!" wasn't associated with a week-end automobile trip?

Labor's Napoleon

John L. Lewis, Once Conservative Labor Leader, Now Embarked On Venture Which May Lead To High Places—Or Ruin.

By Felix Bruner.

PRESENT difficulties within the ranks of organized labor are symptomatic of an attempt to shift the labor movement to a status which it has never before occupied in America—the status of a unified political force. Previous attempts have been made to swing labor as a whole into the political picture, but none has been so elaborate as the present one.

The ramifications of the situation are extensive. They involve the split in the ranks of the American Federation of Labor, formation of Labor's Nonpartisan League, organization of the American Labor Party in New York, and the joining of labor and farm movements in the Northwest.

Before the movement to change the status of labor unions either crystalizes into a political party or disintegrates, industrial strife over a large area seems to be inevitable. Upon the success or failure of the attempt of labor unions to gain recognition in such mass industries as steel, rubber and automobiles will depend the future place of labor in politics.

Organized workmen in the past never have constituted a great political force because they never have thought along political lines. They have represented only a relatively small percentage of the total number of employes in the country. Since Samuel Gompers organized the American Federation of Labor 50 years ago the unions have liked to think of themselves as the aristocracy of labor. Union members have had a tendency to high hat other workers.

The changed situations dates from the enactment of the National Industrial Recovery Act. This act, with its section 7 (a), its labor board and the consequent codes shortening working hours and maintaining or increasing wages, brought certain labor leaders to a realization of the possibilities. If the NRA had been successful, there would have been no room for the present movement. As it was, the recovery act showed the possibilities; its failure provided the opportunity for such men as John L. Lewis to take over.

Lewis Looks To Mass Industries.

LEWIS is essentially a product of NRA. For many years he has been prominent in organized labor. He led his miners up hill and down, but he wielded little power outside his own organization. Politically he was a Republican. Socially he was considered ultra-conservative, even outside the labor movement. Today he is embarked upon an adventure almost Napoleonic in its magnitude. If he fails, he is likely to wreck the labor movement for many years to come. If he succeeds, he is likely to be a candidate for President in 1940, with a ready-made vote that may number several millions.

Lewis cannot succeed on the basis of the present organization of labor. It is not numerically large enough. That is why he pulled out of the American Federation of Labor. The aristocracy of labor did not appeal to him. Numbers were necessary. Industry had changed remarkably since Gompers organized the federation. Numerical strength could be obtained only in the mass industries. The skilled crafts were in the minority.

Lewis organized the Committee for Industrial Organization and took more than a third of the federation with him. He organized Labor's Nonpartisan League and put Maj. George L. Berry in charge. The C. I. O. and the league are so interlocked as to be almost inseparable. They are aiming at the same target and that target lies far beyond the November 3 election.

The very name of Labor's Nonpartisan League is significant. It ostensibly was organized to back the re-election of President Roosevelt, but it carefully avoided calling itself a Roosevelt League or a Democratic League. That is because the plan is not to merge itself into the Democratic or New Deal Party, but to merge as much of the Democratic Party as possible into itself! It is avoiding taking any money from the Democratic organization. It is making no contributions to the party. It is studiously remaining a separate entity.

Labor's Nonpartisan League is spending more than $1,000,000 to bring about the re-election of President Roosevelt. With Mr. Roosevelt in the White House, the plans of Lewis are much more likely to succeed. These plans inevitably involve strikes upon a large scale. Reports vary as to the success of the effort to organize the steel industry, but Lewis says the movement is proceeding according to "plan, chart and blueprint." Not much is being said about it now. It is reported that the organization drive, tied up as if is with the Nonpartisan League, was embarrassing the President and that the soft-pedaling tactics now being employed will continue only until November 3.

Industrial Strife Seen In The Offing.

NEXT SPRING the contracts of the United Mine Workers of America with the mine operators will expire. It was signed last spring with the understanding that Congress would pass the new Guffey bill to replace the act outlawed by the Supreme Court. Congress failed to do so. This will make a new agreement particularly difficult. By the time the mine contract expires Lewis hopes to have a respectable organization in the steel industry, and possibly in rubber and automobiles. He may be in a position—he has intimated that he hopes to be—to make the steel workers' demands for recognition coincide in point of time with the new demands of the miners. A simultaneous strike of miners and steel workers, possibly joined by other mass industry workers, is more than possible. It is extremely likely.

Before next spring the Supreme Court, in the opinion of many, will have discarded the Wagner act setting up the Labor Relations Board. This decision will be seized upon by Lewis and his lieutenants to inflame the workers. It will become a major grievance and it should add to the membership and solidity of the new unions as well as the old.

There is constant talk of compromise of the difficulties resulting in the American Federation of Labor split. While there may be a settlement, Lewis will go ahead anyway. He has behind him such large groups as his own miners, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the International Ladies Garment Workers, the United Textile Workers, the International Typographical Union, in addition to the growing organizations in the mass industries.

Already the new political party, which is the aim of the labor leaders, has become an entity in New York State. The American Labor Party, officially recognized there, is a part of the Lewis movement. It claims a membership of 400,000. Its leaders hope to make it a national party by 1904. Their efforts will be directed to that end. The re-election of President Roosevelt would be only one step in that direction.

There is no connection between this movement and communism. Lewis is far from being a Communist. So is Berry. Sidney Hillman and David Dubinsky, two of Lewis' chief lieutenants, are not Communists, in spite of political ballyhoo to the contrary.

The country may be witnessing the birth of a new political alignment of a kind new to the United States. But before the new force in politics becomes a breathing, kicking entity, the country may expect considerable travail. It almost certainly will come with expiration of the mine-wage contract next spring.

Clipper Leaves Coast On Honolulu Test Hop

Alameda, Calif., Oct. 14 (AP).—The Philippine Clipper, carrying United States Senator William G. McAdoo, newspaper publishers and other passengers, left here at 3:20 p. m. (Pacific standard time) today for Honolulu in the final preview flight before passenger service is established to Manila on October 21.

Other passengers aboard the plane were Amon G. Carter, Fort Worth, Tex., publisher; Roy W. Howard, of the Scripps-Howard newspapers; C. V. Whitney, Pan American director; Wallace Alexander, shipping magnate; Paul Patterson, Baltimore, Md., publisher; W. P. Roth, San Francisco shipping magnate, and Juan Trippe, president of Pan American Airways.

Two Spanish Ministers To Fight for Legation

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 14 (AP).—Madrid's new minister to Czechoslovakia arrived tonight and immediately faced the prospect of a battle for possession of the legation.

The incumbent Spanish charge d'affaires, Gaspar Sanz y Tovars, declared allegiance to the Spanish insurgent junta and promptly swore he would hold the legation against all comers.

The new Madrid appointee, Prof. Jeminez de Asua, declared he would first present his credentials to the foreign office and then decide what to do about getting into the legation.

Creed Held No Excuse For Not Saluting Flag

Atlanta, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Atlanta school board holds that religious belief is no excuse for a pupil's refusal to join others in pledging allegiance to the American flag.

It supported Superintendent W. A. Sutton yesterday in his ruling that 12-year-old Dorothy Leoles could not return to school until she is ready to conform. The child has been under suspension since last June on Sutton's orders.

George Leoles, Dorothy's father, appeared before the board yesterday and said Dorothy had not joined in saluting the flag during the morning school exercises because it was against his religion.

Overtones Of Hope.

To people who have long lived in a gloomy cellar even an indirect beam of sunlight is enormously heartening.

It is no secret that the state of the world in general and of Europe in particular has been for some time and still remains parlous. The fact has frequently been proclaimed from the housetops. International tensions have been rising steadily; armaments have been piling up; incidents of the kind which in the past had led to war have followed each other with dizzying rapidity. No wonder, then, that governments and statesmen have until now concentrated their efforts on preventing things from getting worse; they had practically abandoned the hope of making them better.

But during recent days there has been a subtle but significant change in this situation. Optimism has had a rebirth; hope has begun to revive. The belief, almost universal not long ago, that Europe and the world are plunging toward another catastrophe, is now subject to reservation. The clouds are still heavy, black and forbidding. But they are showing signs of breaking.

• • • •

What has brought about this change. It is difficult to put one's finger on the actual cause. The revival of hope can be attributed less to tangible factors than to imponderables. But these imponderables are clearly linked up with two recent developments. One is the evident determination of France and Great Britain to co-operate in isolating the Spanish war. The other is the joint measures just taken by France, Great Britain and the United States to insure a measure of stability in the field of foreign exchange.

The intrinsic importance of the "hands-off" agreement or of the so-called stabilization accord can easily be exaggerated. The "hands-off" agreement was in its inception tantamount to a confession of weakness. France, supported by Great Britain, was in effect offering to refrain from exercising the legitimate right to supply arms and munitions to the Spanish government if, in turn, the Fascist states agreed to refrain from aiding the rebels, which under international law they had no right to do anyway.

On the other hand, the Anglo-French-American "gentlemen's agreement" of September 25 and the tripartite accord of October 12, which was its natural sequel, may mean much or little, depending on how they are carried out.

Nonetheless, both of these developments are potentially of vast significance. It is the recognition of this fact which is tending to blow away the clouds of utter despair which have hung over the world horizon for many months. Since the armistice of 1918 it has been axiomatic in European diplomacy that the thermometer of peace moves up or down in accordance with the temperature of Anglo-French relations. When London and Paris have been cool to each other the peace of Europe has been in danger; when, on the other hand, they have shown a readiness to work together peace has been strengthened.

• • • •

That was true in 1923 when disagreements between London and Paris over the reparations questions led France to occupy the Ruhr, a step which had many evil consequences. It was equally true in 1925, when the two democracies showed a co-operative spirit that made the Locarno Treaty possible. More recently it was Anglo-French harmony which prevented the Saar question and the Yugoslav-Magyar difficulties from endangering the peace of Europe; it was the fact that Downing street and the Quai d'Orsay were working at cross purposes on the Ethiopian problem that resulted in a weakening of the League and an acceleration of the forces leading to war. If, as the joint stand taken by the two democratic powers on the Spanish situation would indicate, co-operation is again the order of the day in Anglo-French relations, European peace has been strengthened. Certainly were London and Paris tugging in different directions the latest Russian ultimatum to the committee of neutrals would have even more explosive possibilities than it already has.

The three-power financial agreement has in a real sense dotted the "i's" and crossed the "t's" of this new phase in Anglo-French co-operation. But its greatest significance is that it represents a joint undertaking by Great Britain and the United States with the eager approval of France, to work together for monetary stabilization.

There is no question of altruism involved in this Anglo-American co-operation. In agreeing to the accords of September 25 and October 12 this Nation, even as Great Britain, has been the problem from the vantage point of its own interests. Monetary stabilization, or to put it on the basis of the lowest common denominator, avoidance of currency chaos, is essential to American welfare since only through currency stability can world trade be restored to its former level. Nonetheless, the tripartite agreement will, if properly carried out, have a beneficial effect far beyond the borders of the three nations concerned. By making possible a real improvement in the world economic situation it will weaken the forces making for war.

• • • •

Mr. Henry L. Stimson, the former Secretary of State, is not alone in believing that the development of a genuine spirit of co-operation between the United States on the one hand and Great Britain and her dominions on the other would enormously help the solution of the great problems now plaguing the world. In his recent book, "The Far Eastern Crisis," in which he points out, among other things, the evil effects that arose when the two nations were pulling in opposite directions, he says:

"To assure such security, co-operation between the two governments (Great Britain and the United States) in all those executive steps which constitute so much the major part of international action should become frank, efficient and traditional * * * I am happy to say, from my own experience in attempting it, that I believe it is not only possible but easy, and I further believe that my own feeling as to the importance of Anglo-American co-operation in the solution of the problems of this troubled world is shared by the great majority of my countrymen."

Mr. Stimson may be overoptimistic about the attitude of his fellow Americans. It is nevertheless true that just as the cause of peace in Europe is advanced when Great Britain and France stand together, so the cause of world peace is fostered through Anglo-American co-operation. If there has been any improvement in the world situation during recent days, if the fears of war are slightly less intense than they were, if hopes of peace now burn a little bit brighter, all this is due to nothing else than the circumstance that for the first time in years the three greatest democracies of the world are at last showing an inclination to work together, even if for seemingly limited objectives and in a relatively narrow field. It is the spirit that matters and that spirit is enormously encouraging.

English Poet

By William Lyon Phelps

Robert Herrick.

Robert Herrick, the great English lyrical poet, was buried in the churchyard at Dean Prior, Devonshire, England, on October 15, 1674. He was 83 years old.

The first biography of him appeared in 1910. The second edition of his poems appeared in 1823. No stone or inscription marks his grave.

Milton died less than a month later than Herrick. Both men were graduates of Cambridge University, the academic home of so many immortal poets.

Robert Herrick loved crowds, university life, and the hurly-burly of London, where he was a Bohemian, and intimate friend of Ben Jonson.

But he was a clergyman and was given a living in the remote village of Dean Prior, in southwestern England. He felt his banishment, and had the most terrible homesickness for London. Yet his best poems were written in and concerning the country life, the scenery and the village customs. He wrote:

More discontents I never had
Since I was born than here,
Where I have been and still am sad,
In this dull Devonshire.

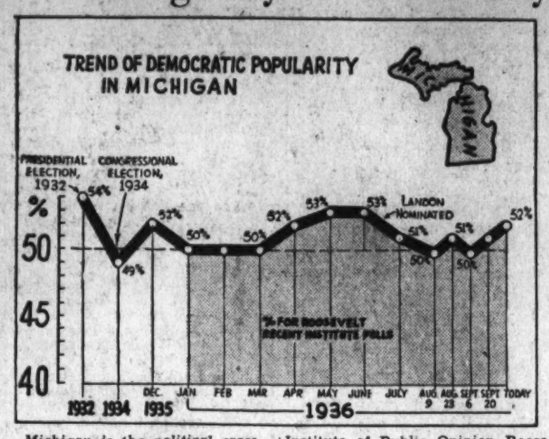
Roosevelt Defends Slim Lead In Michigan by His Visit Today



Michigan is the political crossroads of the United States today as both President Roosevelt and Gov. Landon follow campaign routes through the State. The Governor is on his way to Topeka following a speech in Detroit Tuesday night. The President is en route to Detroit for a speech tonight. The following copyrighted article by the director of the American Institute of Public Opinion shows why both parties are anxious about Michigan.

By George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Oct. 14.—The political warpath of Franklin D. Roosevelt winds into Michigan tomorrow to defend a narrow lead over Alfred M. Landon there, while Gov. Landon will be leaving the State after a tour and speeches calculated to turn the Michigan tide to the G. O. P.

Both candidates are anxious to win the Wolverine State with its 19 electoral votes. Both have picked Detroit for important speeches, but the advantage lies with the President, who polls 52 per cent of the major party vote in Michigan to 48 per cent for Gov. Landon in the current poll of the Institute of Public Opinion.

The poll confirms advice given to President Roosevelt ten days ago by Frank Murphy, of Detroit, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, that the President would carry Michigan at the present time, but that the State is not one of those to be counted "in the bag" by Jim Farley.

The history of Roosevelt sentiment in Michigan since the first of the year emphasizes the closeness of the situation.

In the December, 1935, poll of the Institute of Public Opinion Roosevelt received 52 per cent of the major party vote to 48 per cent for the Republicans. In January, however, he dropped to the 50-50 mark, and there his vote remained—during two more Nation-wide polls—until April, when it slanted upward to 52 per cent once more.

Roosevelt made gains in Michigan during the late spring, but the nomination of Landon in June coincided with a drop for the President in the vote reported July 12. Since that time Michigan has been one of the most "doubtful" of States.

Another complete Nation-wide poll will be reported by the Institute in The Washington Post Sunday, but Michigan may well remain one of the closest tests of Roosevelt-Landon strength in the country, its electorial votes in doubt to the last.

Coughlin's Influence.

Although the Lemke vote in Michigan is not so high as in several New England States or in such Midwest States as North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin, the Union Party candidate polls 6.6 per cent of the total vote there in the current institute poll.

This is more than 2 points stronger than his average for the country. In part it may reflect the influence of the Michigan radio priest, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

On an all-party basis the Michigan vote is:

	% Favoring
Roosevelt	47.6
Landon	44.6
Lemke	6.6
Thomas	1.0
Others	.2
	100

Landon's Talk at Grand Rapids

By the Associated Press.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 14.—The text of Gov. Alf M. Landon's speech here tonight:

It is a real pleasure for me to be here with you in Grand Rapids tonight. The outside world never thinks of your city without being reminded of good furniture. Like so many Americans, I have spent a good deal of my life in close contact with Grand Rapids furniture. If some of you come out to visit me I shall be glad to make you comfortable in a Grand Rapids chair.

The craftsmen whose skill is responsible for the success of your famous industry here did not start by discarding good designs which are still famous, even though some of them go back 'way beyond the "horse and buggy days." On the contrary, they cherished and respected them. They retained some, improved upon others and created in addition new designs of their own. They recognized that progress is the law of life. They have been proud to go forward in a great tradition.

This is typical of the people of the United States. They are a progressive people. That is one reason why America is the hope of the world. As a people we recognize that the best government is a progressive application of old truths. We want forward-looking, liberal government, but government based upon principles that have stood the test of time and experience. We know from history and from the hard school of experience that we desert the old truths only at our peril.

Change, Not Progress.

"By liberal government we mean a government liberal enough in its outlook on life not to mistake mere change for progress. We do not mean the kind of government we have been getting at Washington during the past 3½ years that has confused change with progress and too often has been liberal only in the spending of other people's money.

And speaking of liberality, let me say what I said East and West. If I am elected Chief Executive the budget is going to be balanced, but it is not going to be balanced by depriving our needy unemployed of the relief that is their right until they can recover real jobs at real wages. It is not going to be balanced by denying aid to the American which he ought to have, and which I believe the Nation wants him to have.

It is going to be balanced by substituting good administration for bad at Washington, by cutting out waste, incompetency and extravagance and by using relief funds for relief purposes instead of squandering them on the building up of an insidious political machine. Any one who tells you to the contrary is guilty of trifling with the truth for the sole purpose of attempting to obtain votes under false pretense.

Once the Government at Washington has been restored to an efficient and constitutional basis, there is going to be a general revival of confidence through the country. And confidence is the forerunner of real recovery.

Would Foster Jobs.

What do we mean by real recovery? We mean a revival of agriculture, commerce and labor that will offer our unemployed real jobs again at the best of good wages. This is the only permanent cure for unemployment. How can anybody say that happy days are here again for the American people when so many millions of our fellow citizens are still out of work and so many more millions still in need of relief?

Under this Administration we made the poorest record in our history in recovering from hard times. Those nations who did not try to squander their way out of the depression are much further along the road to recovery than our own. They have less unemployment today than at any time since the Great War ended.

In contrast, our primary need today is jobs for the unemployed. That need is just as great as it was in 1933.

This country has been ripe for recovery for the last two years. We are far behind in expenditures for upkeep and improvements and for expansion. The total of this demand—in industry, in new enterprises, in our homes and on our farms—amounts to billions of dollars. Once all this consumer demand is released, the problem will not be where to find jobs for the unemployed. The task then will be where to find workers for the work.

Nobody can fool the American people. They know recovery when they see it, and many millions of them are getting tired of having it delayed time after time.

We have not made as much progress in coming out of this depression as we have a reasonable right to expect. No one can hide that fact.

Report Shows Marked Gain In Retail Sales

Trade Increase of 11 Per Cent Shown for 9 Months of 1936.

A 31 per cent increase in retail sales in the United States between 1933 and 1935 was revealed yesterday in the first report of the Census Bureau on its current census of business.

This announcement was followed by a statement from the marketing division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce stating that during the first nine months of this year sales in metropolitan areas increased 11 per cent over 1935 and in rural areas the increase was 14 per cent.

The bureau reported that variety store sales increased 7 per cent; chain grocery sales, 4 per cent, and automobile sales, 24 per cent. Chain drug store sales for the first six months of 1936 were 4 per cent greater than for a similar period last year.

The Census Bureau report said that retail sales declined 49 per cent from 1929 to 1933.

"Sales," the report said, "still are nearly one-third lower in dollar volume than during 1929, but a substantial part of the difference is caused by the difference in price levels in the two years."

The report said that employment in retail stores jumped from 3,433,652 in 1933 to 3,899,927 in 1935, an increase of 14 per cent. Pay rolls were reported to have increased 23 per cent.

The effect of prohibition repeal was reflected in the report which showed that in 1935 the income of beer and liquor stores was $325,071,000, compared with $16,730,000 in 1933, which had only one month of repeal. Nearly 98,000 drinking places are shown, with sales in 1935 of $723,996,000.

The report showed that the District of Columbia in 1935 had 6,427 stores, with retail sales amounting to $327,299,000, an increase of 36 per cent in volume over 1933. The average number of employes in District stores was 41,527, with a pay roll of $43,291,000.

Bankers' Chest Unit Holds First Meeting

Frederick P. H. Siddons, chairman of the bankers division of the group solicitation unit of the Community Chest, held the first organization meting of his division workers yesterday. Attending the luncheon were Marcy L. Sperry, chairman of the group solicitation unit, and William J. Flather, jr., chairman of area 5, which includes the bankers, the brokers and the theater divisions.

Siddons pointed out the desirability of early organization and stressed the need for increased participation and higher average giving by the banking group. Sperry emphasized the importance of the Community Chest in Washington, and expressed his hope for its continued support. Flather said the banks could do their part in helping to keep the cost of the Chest's administration at a minimum by making monthly collections for the Chest.

business—to save the American system of private enterprise and economic democracy." And, he added, it was a record "unequaled by any government in history."

"All that this Administration has done, all that it proposes to do—but this it does propose to do," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, "is to use every power and authority of the Federal Government to protect the commerce of America from the selfish forces which have ruined it."

Earlier today, traveling through down-State Illinois in a bid for 29 electoral votes, President Roosevelt hammered away on a contention that under three and a half years of the New Deal conditions have become "better."

Phrased in different language at different points along the line, it was the same theme which had run through more than two dozen talks from the rear platform of the special train taking him on a 5,000-mile circuit of the farming country.

In his first Illinois stop at East St. Louis, Mr. Roosevelt said he was grateful for "all the things that have happened in the last four years because we are certainly coming back to a better prosperity than we've ever had before."

"Things are undoubtedly better than they have been," he told a station crowd at an unscheduled pause at Alton a few minutes later, "and they are going to keep on getting better during the next few years."

Then, in Springfield, the Illinois capital, he told other thousands of listeners that "after those years we went through we can feel very proud that we came through with smiling faces and a determination never to go through that kind of period again."

Twice he spoke of confidence in the outcome of the election only 20 days hence.

The President's stumping tour brought him into Illinois by way of St. Louis, where in midmorning he received one of the biggest ovations of the trip. In the Missouri metropolis, he rode through 4 miles of streets bordered by yelling spectators. A continuous storm of confetti and torn paper cascaded from buildings.

He stopped at a plaza filled with a noisy throng and dedicated a World War soldiers' memorial, which WPA helped finance, then drove to the river front to look over the site of the projected $30,000,000 memorial to Thomas Jefferson, another PWA project, now tied up in litigation.

Again at the memorial, where he stood on a flag-banked platform, the President spoke of recovery:

"In what we have done during the last three years to promote recovery at home, to extend the hand of the good neighbor to the nations of the world, to break down the barriers to commerce which divide nation from nation, we are promoting the course of peace throughout the world."

Speaking reverently of the men in whose honor the memorial building is being erected, he asserted, "We best honor the memory of those dead by striving for peace, that the terror of the days of war will be with us no more."

The World War, he said, offered no exception in causing major economic and social disturbances, adding that "new problems arise to take the place of the old."

"We rejoice here," he said, "that those problems are being met and solved without impairing our faith and confidence in the people's ability to do it themselves by the peaceful process of democratic representative government."

After crossing the Mississippi River to East St. Louis the Chief Executive stood on the platform of his private car with Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois and remarked that he could not agree that alternating waves of prosperity and depression were necessary.

He said he believed the "human race is capable of planning ahead for a better-ordered economy."

At Bloomington the campaign special was greeted by a cheering crowd that spread around the tracks, nearby hillsides, and on automobile hoods and tops. To the crowd the President said:

"There are some people in the United States who would rather turn the Government over to a chosen few; I would rather leave it in the hands of what we call the democracy of the United States."

"On this trip I have been finding some ghosts," he said. "When I was farther west I found people going around telling about the ghost taxes. * * * But luckily, my friends, there are not many actual believers in ghosts these days."

Mr. Roosevelt's special train will carry him tomorrow on an eliptical course through Michigan, winding up in Detroit for another speech tomorrow night. On the way he had arranged to make brief talks from the train at Grand Rapids, Lansing, Flint and Pontiac.

Text of President Roosevelt's Address at Chicago Stadium

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—The text of President Roosevelt's speech here tonight follows:

Four years ago I dropped into this city from the airways—an old friend come in a new way—to accept in this hall the nomination for the Presidency of the United States. I came to a Chicago fighting with its back to the wall—factories closed, markets silent, banks shaky, ships and trains empty.

Today those factories sing the song of industry, markets hum with bustling movement, banks are secure, ships and trains are running full. Once again it is Chicago as Carl Sandburg saw it—"the city of the big shoulders"—the city that smiles. And with Chicago a whole nation that had not been cheerful for years is full of cheer once more.

On this trip through the Nation I have talked to farmers, I have talked to miners, I have talked to industrial workers—and in all that I have seen and heard one fact has been as clear as crystal—that they are part and parcel of a rounded whole, and that none of them can succeed in their chosen occupations if those in the other occupations fail in their prosperity. I have driven home that point.

Message to Businessmen.

Tonight I give the same message to the businessmen of America—to those who make and sell the processed goods the Nation uses and to the men and women who work for them.

To them I say:

Do you have a deposit in the bank? It is safer today than it has ever been in our history. It is guaranteed. Last October 1 marked the end of the first full year in 55 years without a single failure of a national bank in the United States. Isn't that on the credit side of the Government's account with you?

Are you an investor? Your stocks and bonds are up to five and six year high levels.

Are you a merchant? Your markets have the precious lifeblood of purchasing power. Your customers on the farms have better incomes and smaller debts. Your customers in the cities have more jobs, surer jobs, better jobs. Didn't your Government have something to do with that?

Are you in industry? Industrial earnings, industrial profits are the highest in four, six or even seven years! Bankruptcies are at a new low. Your Government takes some credit for that.

Are you in railroads? Freight loadings are steadily going up. Passenger receipts are steadily going up—have in some cases doubled—because your Government made the railroads cut rates and make money.

Are you a middleman in the great stream of farm products? The meat and grain that move through your yards and elevators have a steadier supply, a steadier demand and steadier prices than you have known for years. And your Government is trying to keep it that way.

Some people say that all this recovery has just happened. But in a complicated modern world recoveries from depressions do not just happen. The years from 1929 to 1933, when we waited for recovery just to happen, prove the point.

Acted in 1933.

But in 1933 we did not wait. We acted. Behind the growing recovery of today is a story of deliberate Government acceptance of responsibility to save business—to save the American system of private enterprise and economic democracy—a record unequaled by any government in history.

What had the previous Administration in Washington done for four years? Nothing. Why? For a very fundamental reason. That Administration was not industrially minded—nor agriculturally minded—nor business-minded. It was a high finance-minded—manned and controlled by a handful of men who in turn controlled, and by one financial device or another took their toll from the greater part of all other business and industry.

Let me make one simple statement. When I refer to high finance I am not talking about all great bankers, or all great corporation executives, or all multimillionaires—any more than Theodore Roosevelt, in using the term "malefactors of great wealth" implied that all men of great wealth were "malefactors." I do not even imply that the majority of them are bad citizens. The opposite is true.

Majority Good Citizens.

Just in the same way, the overwhelming majority of businessmen in this country are good citizens and the proportion of those who are not is probably about the same proportion as in the other occupations and professions of life.

When I speak of high finance as a harmful factor in recent years, I am speaking about a minority which includes the type of individual who speculates with other people's money—and you in Chicago know the kind I refer to—and also the type of individual who says that popular government cannot be trusted and, therefore, that the control of business of all kinds—and, indeed, of Government itself—should be vested in the hands of 100 or 200 allwise individuals controlling the purse-strings of the Nation.

High finance of this type refused to permit Government credit to go directly to the industrialist, to the businessman, to the home owner, to the farmer. They wanted it to trickle down from the top, through the intricate arrangements which they controlled and by which they were able to levy tribute on every business in the land.

Other People's Money.

They did not want interest rates to be reduced by the use of Government funds—for that would affect the rate of interest which they themselves wanted to charge. They did not want Government supervision over financial markets through which they manipulated their monopolies with other people's money.

They called "unsound," the Government, hypnotized by its indebtedness to them, stood by and let the depression drive industry and business toward bankruptcy.

America is an economic unit. New means and methods of transportation and communications have made us economically as well as politically a single Nation. Because kidnapers and bank robbers could in a high-powered car speed across State lines it became necessary, in order to protect our people, to invoke the power of the Federal Government.

In the same way speculators and manipulators from across State lines and regardless of State lines, have lured the unsuspecting and the unwary to financial destruction. In the same way across State lines, there have been built up intricate corporate structures, piling bond upon stock and stock upon bond—huge monopolies which were stifling independent business and private enterprise.

Selfish Forces.

There was no power under heaven that could protect the people against that sort of thing except a people's government at Washington. All that this Administration has done, all that it proposes to do—and this it does propose to do—is to use every power and authority of the Federal Government to protect the commerce of America from the selfish forces which ruined it.

Always, month in and month out, during these three and a half years, your Government has had but one sign on its desk—"seek only the greater good of the greater number of Americans." And in appraising the record, remember two things. First, this Administration was called upon to act after a previous administration and all combined forces of private enterprise had failed. Secondly, in spite of all the demand for speed, the complexity of the problem and all the vast sums of money involved, we have had no Teapot Dome.

We found when we came to Washington in 1933, that the business and industry of the Nation were like a train which had gone off the rails into a ditch. Our first job was to get it out of the ditch and start it up the track again as far as the shops. Our next job was to repair it—the broken axles which had gotten it off the road, the engine which had been worn down by gross misuse.

What was it that the average businessman wanted Government to do for him—to do immediately in 1933?

Deflation, Falling Prices.

1. Stop deflation and falling prices—and we did it.

2. Increase the purchasing power of his customers who were industrial workers in the cities—and we did it.

3. Increase the purchasing power of his customers on the farms—and we did it.

4. Decrease interest rates, power rates and transportation rates, and we did it.

5. Protect him from the losses due to crime, bank robbers, kidnapers, blackmailers—and we did it.

How did we do it? By a sound monetary policy which raised prices. By reorganizing the banks of the Nation, and insuring their deposits. By bringing the businessmen of the Nation together and encouraging them to pay higher wages, to shorten working hours, and to discourage that minority among their own members who were engaging in unfair competition and unethical practices.

Through the AAA, through our cattle buying program, through our program of drought relief and flood relief, through the Farm Credit Administration, we raised the income of the customers of business who lived on the farms. By our program to provide work for the unemployed, by our CCC camps, and other measures, greater purchasing power was given to those who lived in our cities.

Train Back on Rails.

Money began going around again. The dollars paid out by Government were spent in the stores and shops of the Nation, and spent again to the wholesaler, and spent again to the factory, and spent again to the wage earner, and then spent again in another store and shop. The wheels of business began to turn again; the train was back on the rails.

Mind you, it did not get out of the ditch itself, it was hauled out by your Government.

And we hauled it along the road. PWA, WPA, both provided normal and useful employment for hundreds of thousands of workers. Hundreds of millions of dollars got into circulation when we liquidated the assets of closed banks through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Millions more when we loaned money for home building and home financing through the Federal housing program. Hundreds of millions more in loans and grants to enable municipalities to build needed improvements. Hundreds of millions more through the CCC.

In Terms of Preservation.

I am not going to talk tonight about how much our program to provide work for the unemployed meant to the Nation as a whole. That cannot be measured in dollars and cents. It can be measured only in terms of the preservation of the families of America.

But as far as business goes, it can be measured in terms of sales made and goods moving.

The train of American business is moving ahead.

But you people know what I mean when I say it was clear that if the train is to run smoothly again the cars will have to be loaded more evenly. We have made a definite start in getting the train loaded more evenly, in order that axles may not break again.

For example, we have provided a sounder and cheaper money market and a sound banking and securities system. You businessmen know how much legitimate business you lost because your customers were robbed by fake securities or impoverished by shaky banks.

By our monetary policy we have kept prices up and lightened the burden of debt. It is easier to get credit. It is easier to repay.

Transportation Rates.

We have given the businessman cheaper transportation rates.

But, above all, we have fought to break the deadly grip which monopoly has in the past been able to fasten on the business of the Nation.

Because we cherished our system of private property and free enterprise and were determined to preserve it as the foundation of our traditional American system, we recalled the warning of Thomas Jefferson that "widespread poverty and concentrated wealth cannot long endure side by side in a democracy."

Our job was to preserve the American ideal of economic as well as political democracy, against the abuse of concentration of economic power that had been insidiously growing up among us in the last 50 years, particularly during the 12 years of preceding administrations. Free economic enterprise was being weeded out at an alarming pace.

During those years of false prosperity and during the more recent years of exhausing depression, one business after another, one small corporation after another, their resources depleted, had failed or had fallen into the lap of a bigger competitor.

Dangerous Thing.

A dangerous thing was happening. Half of the industrial corporate wealth of the country had come under the control of less than 200 huge corporations. That is not all. These huge corporations in some cases did not even try to compete with each other. They themselves were tied together by interlocking directors, interlocking bankers, interlocking lawyers.

This concentration of wealth and power has been built upon other people's money, other people's business, other people's labor. Under this concentration independent business was allowed to exist only by sufferance. It has been a menace to the social system as well as the economic system which we call American democracy.

There is no excuse for it in the cold terms of industrial efficiency.

There is no excuse for it from the point of view of the average investor.

There is no excuse for it from the point of view of the independent business man.

I believe, I have always believed, and I will always believe in private enterprise as the backbone of economic well-being in America.

Private Enterprise.

But I know, and you know, and every independent business man who has had to struggle against the competition of monopolies knows, that this concentration of economic power in all-embracing corporations does not represent private enterprise as we Americans cherish it and propose to foster it. On the contrary, it represents private enterprise become a kind of private government which is a power unto itself—a regimentation of other people's money and other people's lives.

Back in Kansas I spoke about bogey men and fairy tales which the real Republican leaders, many of whom are part of this concentrated power, are using to spread fear among the American people.

You good people have heard about these fairy tales and bogey men, too. You have heard about how antagonistic to business this Administration is said to be. You have heard all about the dangers which the business of America is supposed to be facing if this Administration continues.

Free Enterprise.

The answer to that is the record of what we have done. It was this Administration which saved the system of private profit and free enterprise after it had been dragged to the brink of ruin by these same leaders who now try to scare you.

Look at the advance in private business in the last three and a half years; and read there what we think about private business.

Today for the first time in seven years the banker, the storekeeper, the small factory owner, the industrialist, can all sit back and enjoy the company of their ledgers. They are in the black. That is where we want them to be; that is where our policies aim to be; that is where we intend them to be in the future.

Some of these people really forget how sick they were. But I know how sick they were. I have their charts. I know how the knees of all of our rugged individualists were trembling four years ago and how their hearts fluttered. They came to Washington in great numbers. Washington did not look like a dangerous bureaucracy to them then. Oh! no, it looked like an emergency hospital. All of the distinguished patients wanted two things—a quick hypodermic to end the pain and a course of treatment to cure the disease. We gave them both. And now most of the patients seem to be doing very nicely. Some of them are even well enough to throw their crutches at the doctor.

Struggle for Business.

The struggle against private monopoly is a struggle for, and not against, American business. It is a struggle to preserve individual enterprise and economic freedom.

I believe in individualism. I believe in it in the arts, the sciences and professions. I believe in it in business. I believe in individualism in all of these things—up to the point where the individualist starts to operate at the expense of society. American businessmen do not believe in it beyond that point. We have all suffered in the past from individualism run wild—society has suffered and business has suffered.

Believing in the solvency of business, the solvency of farmers and the solvency of workers, I believe also in the solvency of government. Your Government is solvent.

The net Federal debt today is lower in proportion to the income of the Nation and in proportion to the wealth of the Nation than it was on March 4, 1933.

Causes Disappearing.

In the future it will become lower still because with the rising tide of the national income and national wealth the very causes of our emergency spending are disappearing. Government expenditures are coming down and Government income is going up. The opportunities for private enterprise will continue to expand.

The people of America have no quarrel with business. They insist only that the power of concentrated wealth shall not be abused.

We have come through a hard struggle to preserve democracy in America. Where other nations in other parts of the world have lost that fight, we have won.

The businessmen of America and all other citizens have joined in a firm resolve to hold the fruits of that victory—to cling to the old ideals and old fundamentals upon which America has grown great.

Danzig Police Disband Party, Major Nazi Foe

Free City of Danzig, Oct. 14.—The Social Democratic Party and affiliated organizations, comprising the strongest opposition to Nazi political groups, was disbanded by police today.

The dissolution order was based on alleged illegal ownership of ammunition which Nazi secret police claimed they discovered during a raid on party headquarters October 8.

The official action followed a strong political campaign waged by the Nazis to gain complete control of the Free City government during which 100 Social Democratic leaders were arrested.

Mary McDowell Dead; Chicago Social Worker

Chicago, Oct. 14 (AP).—Miss Mary McDowell, 82, founder of the University of Chicago Settlement House, died today at the home of her brother, Irving McDowell. Physicians said a paralytic stroke caused her death.

For the last 30 years Miss McDowell had been active in Chicago social work. As founder of the Univeristy of Chicago Settlement House and by participating in scores of other activities for social progress, she gained world recognition.

Sale Efforts Futile, Fillmore Home Razed

New Hope, N. Y., Oct. 14 (AP).—The boyhood home of Millard Fillmore, President from 1850 to 1853, has been torn down. Owners of the property who sought to sell it were unable to obtain the $750 price asked and as a result the sturdy timbers of the old-fashioned farm home were removed and used in the erection of a barn.

Death Brings Truce to Man 'Broken' in War

Irishman, Nerves Shattered, Was Plagued by Illusion of Battle.

Patrick A. Franklin, a fighting man from Tipperary, died in Gallinger Hospital yesterday. In death he found an armistice denied him in life, for, according to his family, the World War never really ended for Pat. He probably heard the booming of the German guns, they said, even as life left him.

A native of Ballylooby, Tipperary, Pat was 24 and a member of the Irish Guards when the World War broke out in 1914. He and 40,000 other guards were among the first to go to the front.

According to William F. (Bill) Franklin, a brother, of 1743 Church street northwest, Pat took part in the first bloody Battle of Mons, and was wounded.

"For two days," said Bill, "Pat hid behind a dead horse until stretcher bearers could rescue him. They sent him back to a hospital in England for treatment. After he was well, he went back to the front and took part in the second Battle of Mons. He was wounded in that, too.

"He was one of the very few among those 40,000 Irish to survive the war. While he was at the hospial King George decorated him with the Star of Mons.

"He was in hospitals for years after the war. His wounds had healed, but he was a nervous wreck. In 1928 we brought him over here, thinking we could make him comfortable.

"The first night he went to sleep in our house, he woke up screaming. He said the 'Huns' were shelling him. The same thing happened nearly every night. Finally he got to walking the streets by night and sleeping by day.

"Every noise caused him to jump. We got him a job with the District, but he was too nervous to hold it."

Pat, according to Bill, wandered all over the country, but could relax nowhere. In the end he sought to soothe his screaming nerves with liquor. That made him worse, and it was as an alcoholic that he was taken to Gallinger Hospital a few days ago.

Pat will be buried tomorrow in Mount Olivet Cemetery and given honors due a soldier of the Allies. A firing squad and a bugler will be sent over from Fort Myer. Bill's American Legion will send an honor guard.

A requiem mass will be sung for Pat at St. Matthews Catholic Church at 10 a. m.

Services Tomorrow For Lieut. Griffith

Last rites for Lieut. Russell H. Griffith, of the Army Air Corps, who died when his plane crashed near Dallas, Tex., last Monday, will be held with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery tomorrow at 1 p. m. with the Rev. H. H. Sterrett officiating.

Born in Fort Meade, S. Dak., October 11, 1907, Lieut. Griffith was graduated from West Point in the class of 1931, and assigned to the Air Corps.

Harman Dies; Mine Operator In West Virginia

By the Associated Press.

Williamson, W. Va., Oct. 14.—The body of Everett McDowell Harman, 47, southern West Virginia coal operator, was sent to Washington, D. C., tonight for services, which probably will be held Friday.

Harman, prominent for many years in the industrial and civic life of this section, died early today at his home at Puritan of heart disease.

He had been in ill health for several months, but physicians said his condition did not become alarming until a few hours before his death.

He was president and general manager of the Puritan Coal Co., and a director of the Turkey Gap Co. at Dott, in Mercer County.

Born in McDowell County, the son of the late Frank P. Harman, a pioneer coal operator, Harman was a graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He spent much of his early life in Lynchburg, Va., and Washington.

Survivors include his widow, the former Ada Birmingham, of Washington; a brother, Frank P. Harman, jr., president of Hamilton National Bank of Washington; two sisters, Mrs. Mary Snyder, of Salisbury, N. C., and Mrs. Harrut Early, of Richmond, Va.

E. Bonnelycke, Attorney, Dies Of Long Illness

Was Born in Denmark But Came to U. S. in 1903; Rites Tomorrow.

Emil Bonnelycke, internationally known patent attorney, died Tuesday night at his home at 204 Bradley boulevard, Chevy Chase, Md., after a year's illness.

Mr. Bonnelycke, who had obtained many foreign patents for corporations, was 60 years old. He was born at Odder, Denmark, was graduated from the University of Copenhagen and came to this country in 1903.

He was a member of the American Patent Law Association, the University Club, Columbia Country Club and the Danish Club.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Marie Bonnelycke, of Chevy Chase, and a brother and three sisters of Copenhagen.

Funeral services will be at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the residence. The Rev. Edgar J. Ziegler, assistant pastor of Luther Place Memorial Lutheran Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

7 Fisher Brothers' Mother Dies at 79

Detroit, Oct. 14 (AP).—Mrs. Margaret Thesian Fisher, mother of the seven Fisher brothers who helped make automotive history, died last night after a week's illness.

Her sons were with her when she died, as they were when she observed her seventy-ninth birthday anniversary last January.

Mrs. Fisher was born in Sandusky, Ohio. There she married Lawrence Fisher, son of a Peru, Ohio, blacksmith. They moved to Norwalk, where the seven sons learned their father's business, wagon making.

One by one the older boys left to engage in the new automobile industry springing up in Detroit, but the family continued as a unit. Even after the name Fisher Brothers became synonymous with an industrial colossus, the family worked together—and played together.

After the death of the husband and father, Mrs. Fisher came to Detroit. Here, she sought no social life, although she was deeply interested in charities. Each day one or more of her sons or her three daughters visited with her. A schedule of visits was maintained meticulously despite business cares.

Dollar to Be Base In Monetary Pact

By the Associated Press.

The dollar, backed by a $10,985,000,000 gold reserve, was revealed yesterday as the keystone of the new Anglo-Franco-American system for stabilizing currency exchanges.

The Treasury Department, working out technical details of the tripower monetary agreement, said a selling price for gold would be announced only by the United States.

Although gold will flow freely between the stabilization funds of all three nations, France and England will keep their selling prices secret, Treasury officials announced.

The American price remained yesterday at $35 per fine ounce, though it may be changed on 24 hours' notice, if necessary to protect internal prosperity.

SEE HOW FISHER GLORIFIES THE STEEL BODY

...making it the outstanding feature of the new 1937 cars!

TAKE $18,000,000 — boldly spend it all for new tools, presses, facilities;

Take a hundred and fifty designers, artisans, sculptors, modelers — give them free rein;

Take three years and concentrate all these resources of money, men, plants and experience on a single major problem—

Then you have matched what the Fisher Division of General Motors employed to perfect its latest contribution to motor car progress, the UNISTEEL TURRET TOP BODY!

No motor car body that ever went upon a highway before, cradled its passengers in such strength, solidity, beauty, room, comfort and SAFETY.

Underfoot is the solid steel floor, grooved indentations for greater strength—steel floor braced by "U"-shaped steel cross members and lengthwise steel rockers all welded to the reinforced steel floor.

In front are steel pillars welded to steel cowl and seamless steel top.

The center pillar is made of two steel panels — the outer and inner steel panels welded together, and the whole pillar is welded to the steel underbody structure and to the side roof rail of steel.

The outer door panels of steel are welded to the inner door steel panels, reinforced at hinges and other points of strain with added steel.

All body panels are stamped from tough drawn steel and welded to steel floor, steel roof and steel cowl.

The whole Unisteel Turret Top Body by Fisher forms an all-round armor of stout, weave-proof, wear-proof, shock-resistant steel—every member a structural member and contributing to the greater strength and substantial rigidity of the whole.

Unions Demand Carnegie Boost Pay of 50,000

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14.—Eighteen employe representatives of nine Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation mills in the Pittsburgh-Youngstown area won recognition today from the concern as a collective bargaining agency for their 50,000 fellow workers and immediately demanded a wage increase.

A statement issued by the chairman, Fred W. Bohne, of McDonald, Ohio, and a press committee asserted an answer to the wage demand is expected at the council's next meeting, Tuesday.

The announcement immediately revived reports of an impending wage increase in the industry. Benjamin F. Fairless, president, was in New York, where Wall Street heard he was discussing wages with high officials of the United States Steel Corporation, parent concern of Carnegie-Illinois.

The employe representative council had been in session for three days. The representatives withheld the amount of increase which was asked. The company already has before it requests from several of its plant representative committees for increases, ranging from a flat 15 per cent boost to one of $1.12 a day, which would make the minimum pay $5 a day.

Jimmie Fidler In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, OCT. 15.

Settin' around (Twentieth Century-Fox). This studio, one of the richest in the business, is striving feverishly to rebuild its depleted star-ranks. That accounts for tremendous publicity campaigns on Simone Simon, June Lang, Slaire Trevor, Rochelle Hudson and others. The way a studio weighs such campaigns, if one of six starlets wins and holds box-office appeal, loss of the other five will not matter. Right now (if her temperament does not spoil things) Simone Simon appears to be the big catch of the studio's gamble in souls.

On the "Reunion" set, I talked with Jean Hersholt and Dorothy Peterson, recently returned from the Dionne Quintuplets' headquarters in Canada. Jean says that Mr. Dionne is not faring as badly as people are led to believe. The super papa operates a refreshment stand near the hospital where he sells autographs (his own) at 25 cents a copy. He coins as much as $200 in a single day.

Seeing Miss Peterson, who so capably played the nurse in the first Dionne picture (The Country Doctor) reminded me that theaters are now showing pictures in which she appears with no screen credit. I cannot conceive of the stupidity of a studio that would refuse to capitalize on Miss Peterson's success in the Dionne pictures. Yet, if you see "The Devil Is a Sissy," you will see Miss Peterson and no screen credit (unless it is added in New York. It was not given at Hollywood previews).

On a process stage I encountered Claire Trevor, taking an automobile ride for a "Career Woman" sequence. She sat in a motionless car, while on a screen behind her flashed scenery filmed days before. When you see this sequence at your theater, Claire will appear to be motoring. The scene was a long one; behind the actress on the process screen flashed blocks of streets, a ridge, a drive through a park and finally a stop at a depot. When the driver called "Cut!" and Miss Trevor got off and walked to my side, "Whew!" she exclaimed, "was that a long tour!"

On the "Lloyd's of London" set I found Sir Guy Standing and Wilfred Lawson, the English actors. Both are throughly seasoned troupers; while I watched they enacted a difficult scene so well that a second take was not necessary. "If all actors were as capable," Director Henry King, complimented, right out loud, "fine pictures could be made at low cost."

The assistant director has found a perfect way to locate Sir Guy when he is needed for a scene. "I located the prettiest girl on the set," he said, "then move my eyes 10 inches and there is Standing."

Helmet Thwarts Dread Silicosis

Blasters Saved From Silicosis By New Helmet off, the oxygen supply is also stopped, but by releasing a cap the miners can breathe in a fresh air supply, filtered of all silica dust, from the mining chamber.

Biggs is working on a pump as a supplement to the helmet, which will generate its own oxygen supply in the chamber and do away with the necessity of connecting the gas mask to the compressed air tubing. The pump, Biggs pointed out, would make for greater mobility.

Informed of Biggs' invention, Daniel Harrington, in charge of safety work for the Bureau of Mines, said sand-blasting helmets in themselves were not new, but that so far all those in existence had "definite limitations."

Most of the helmets permit a little seepage of silica dust, he said, but the greatest objection was that they were uncomfortable to work in.

Keeps Commercial Rights.

Under naval regulations, Biggs keeps commercial rights to his invention, but the Navy retains the right to use the patent for its own purposes. The helmets are being made by the Mine Safety Appliance Co. of Pittsburgh, to sell from $35 to $40 each.

Biggs is the Navy's representative on the silicosis committee appointed recently by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins following the storm of protest in the press and in Congress over the death of men who contracted silicosis while working on the Gauley Bridge in West Virginia.

At the time, Representative Vito Marcantonio, of New York, who sought a House investigation into the construction of the bridge, told a sub-committee that 476 men who worked on the bridge had died of silicosis and that 1,500 other bridge workers faced slow but certain death.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

U. S. Heiresses Scorned Him; Duke Bankrupt

'Prospecting' Trip for Bridal Gold Failed to Pan Out, Leinster Admits.

London, Oct. 14.—The elegant seventh Duke of Leinster ruefully testified today that an unsuccessful "prospecting" trip for a wealthy American bride had availed him naught save in emptied pocketbook.

The duke, 44 years old, appeared today in bankruptcy court to explain to creditors why he owed some $700,000 and had no assets convertible into cash.

He conceived the idea of a matrimonial junket to the United States in 1928, the duke testified, "with the idea of marrying somebody rich."

But, he added, the only two applicants who came forward to share his title, and assume his debts, just didn't pan out.

The golden bonds of matrimony with the duke was avoided by the first heiress, he testified, after "only a few weeks."

The second heiress, he said, did not announce her disinclination to marry him until "after six months."

About a month after his negotiations with the second "possibility" broke down, the duke married Mrs. Raffaelle van Neck, of New York, in December, 1932.

The duke inherited his title when his elder brother was killed in action in 1915. At one time the duke found he owed some 300,000 pounds sterling ($1,500,000), so he incorporated himself as "The Dukedom of Leinster Estates, Ltd."

U. S. Cautions Airport Firm On Trespass

Cammerer, of National Parks Service, Sends Notice to Operators.

The Federal Government yesterday warned the Washington-Hoover Airport firm that it is encroaching on Government land in its plans for a new take-off runway.

The protest was made by Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Parks Service, who wrote the firm:

"Although the service is desirous of co-operating to permit the completion of the airport, it is essential that your company contact this office regarding the use, for airport purposes of the land owned by Government.

"Unless the request embodied in our letter of October 1 is complied with immediately, there will remain no alternative but to initiate appropriate action to protect the interest of the United States."

Cammerer said the airport is embarking on "unauthorized extension of runways upon Government-owned land under jurisdiction of this service."

Mighty Hugger Escapes.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 14 (AP).—A jury decided Mrs. L. Brunnett, widow, could not recover $5,000 damages because Karl W. Hagedorn, a suitor, hugged her and broke four of her ribs. Mrs. Brunnett contended Hagedorn's huge was not a gesture of esteem but aggravated assault.

Modern Gas Cookery

Even the most experienced cooks are astonished at the difference a modern gas range makes in their cooking. Automatic oven heat control assures flakier pie crust, fluffier cakes . . . eliminates baking failures. New, high speed broilers seal in more flavor in grilled foods!

It's true. And in addition to better cooked foods, modern gas ranges save hours of kitchen time, effect economies in both food and fuel. Well worth getting rid of your old stove for these important aids!

Visit our showrooms during our current sale of Glenwood ranges. You can buy one on special easy terms for as little as $2.68 a month!

There's nothing like GAS for BROILING — Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Full flavor is saved.

ROASTING — Gas gives you the oven ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture is allowed to escape, preventing that flat "steamed flavor."

BAKING — Baking requires even heat throughout the oven and unlimited range of baking temperatures, for light, evenly browned cakes, pies, breads. Gas gives both!

FRYING — Perfect, speedy frying requires instant high heat—even spread of heat under the skillet—numberless heat variations. Gas gives all three!

BOILING — Faster! Gas brings foods to a boil in 1/3 the time or less of other fuels. More flexible, it gives you the exact shades of heat you need.

Lively Comedy Of the Capital Due Here Soon

Jane Cowl in "First Lady" Will Compete With Fine Films Next Week.

Jane Cowl, last seen in Washington as star of "Rain From Heaven," with John Halliday and Lily Cahill in support, will be the star of the bill at the National Theater next week, beginning Monday night, in the widely discussed comedy-drama of Washington life, "First Lady." The play is a collaboration of Katherine Dayton and George S. Kaufman's and deals with feminine politics as practiced in the drawing rooms of the National Capital. Although the authors disclaim any intention of drawing photographic likenesses in their characterizations, it is said that only a little imagination is necessary to know the identities of those whose activities suggested the plot. Miss Cowl is supported by Ann Mason, as her bitter rival; Thomas Findlay and a total cast of 25 players. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The Earle Theater will present the gala, sixth anniversary bill, celebrating the establishment of its present eminently successful policy, for the week beginning tomorrow. On the screen, the feature will be "Stage Struck," in which the stellar roles are played by Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, the newlyweds. In the supporting cast are such eminent players as Warren William, Frank McHugh, Jeanne Madden, the Yacht Club Boys and numerous others. The vaudeville bill, which will be one of the most pretentious in the history of the house, will be headlined by Ina Ray Hutton and Her Melodears. Others on the bill will include Margie Palm, "Grace Personified," Frank and Pete Trado, long known as the Trado Twins, and the 24 Bill Powers Dancing Beauties.

For the week beginning tomorrow, Loew's Capitol Theater will present as it major screen attraction the latest demonstration of the rapid progress that is being made in the field of natural color photography. "Ramona," a new picturization of the famous Helen Hunt Jackson novel, is done entirely in natural color by the new three-tone Technicolor process and is by far the most realistic of all the color pictures that have been made to date. Loretta Young and Don Ameche appear in the pivotal roles of Ramona and Alessandro, with a large and distinguished cast in support. On the stage the bill will be headlined by those two admirable buffoons, Al Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron, "the team that made the king laugh," when they played London. The Elida Ballet and other acts will round out the program.

A week earlier than was expected, Shirley Temple will take possession of the screen at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday in her latest starring feature, "Dimples," in which she is supported by Frank Morgan, Stepin Fetchit, Jane Darwell, Helen Westley, Robert Kent, Astrid Allwyn, Herman Bing, Julius Tannen and others of note. In this subject Shirley is cast as a little princess of the Bowery in a gay tale set in the colorful New York of 1850. She sings six new hit tunes, dances new steps and performs the astonishing feat of enacting every role in the minstrel show.

"Murder With Pictures," a new Paramount mystery picture, will bring Lew Ayres, Gail Patrick and Paul Kelly to the screen of the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is a novel one utilizing for the first time the transmission of "Wirephotos," such as The Post reproduces in its pages daily, as an aid to drama. Others in the cast include Ernest Cossart, Onslow Stevens, Benny Baker and Joyce Compton. The bill will be completed by the customary short subjects and full newsreel.

Having been seen first as a road show attraction at the National, then as a popular priced feature at the Palace, "The Great Ziegfeld" now moves down F street to the Columbia Theater for a week's engagement beginning tomorrow. William Powell, Luise Rainer, Myrna Loy and Frank Morgan head an all-star cast in this most sumptuous and most spectacular of all musical films.

RKO-Keith's Theater announces the continuation of the run of "My Man Godfrey," costarring William Powell and Carole Lombard, through next Tuesday. This has proved one of the comedy hits of the year. On Wednesday of next week, "The Gay Desperado," a film which already has been celebrated in these columns, will take possession of the Fifteenth street screen.

"Cynara," with Ronald Colman, Kay Francis and Henry Stephenson, will continue the major feature of the Belasco Theater's bill until Tuesday of next week, when the attraction will be "Marie," or "Spring Shower," an Hungarian, prize-winning screen production that is said to be a classic, although banned by the censors in both New York and Pennsylvania. Then will come the European version of "Les Miserables."

At the Rialto, "The Thin Man," on its final Washington run, has caught on to such an extent that it probably will be continued through another week. The principal roles are played by William Powell and Myrna Loy. The bill is augumented by short subjects and newsreel.

Opening today at the Little Theater the attraction will be a revival of "Catherine the Great," the film that introduced Elisabeth Bergner to American audiences. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., is her leading man and an able cast appears in support. The story is based on the life of Empress Catherine of Russia. Short subjects and newsreel will complete the new bill.

"The Girls From Mars" is the title of the burlesque offering to be presented in the Gayety Theater for the week beginning Sunday afternoon. Mae Brown, "the Dresden doll of burlesk;" Eddie Lloyd and Charlie Ford head the cast of principals.

Geese Escape Falls.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Oct. 14 (AP).—A flock of about 1,000 wild geese, which for two days had appeared to be in danger of being swept over Niagara Falls, rose from the Niagara River early today and flew safely away.

Costar in Color Film of "Ramona"

Loretta Young and Don Ameche, pictured above in their black wigs and Indian regalia, contribute greatly to the romance and pathos of the new Technicolor picturization of Helen Hunt Jackson's celebrated novel of "Ramona." This subject, coming to the screen of Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow, offers the finest example to date of the artistry of which the new three-tone process of color photography is capable. It will hasten the obsolescence of the flat and outworn black and white film.

About the Showshops

WITH the cinema compiling new records for originality and excellence in the quality of its musical productions—"The Great Ziegfeld," "The Gay Desperado," the Grace Moore vehicles, etc, etc.—the traditional theater seems to be indulging a decided pique with regard to this type of entertainment.

BELL.

In the old days of the 40-week season, when traveling road attractions were almost too numerous for the theaters of the country to accommodate, a large proportion of the productions were of a musical nature. All of the major producers—the Frohmans, the Shuberts, Klaw and Erlanger, Henry W. Savage, Charles Dillingham and again, etc., etc.—contributed several musical offerings a season to the boards, in addition to their more serious dramatic works. But where are the operettas, the musical comedies and the revues this season?

The question is more an expression of curiosity than of complaint. But pause a moment to contemplate the early weeks of what promises to be one of the National Theater's most illustrious years. We have had "St. Helena," "And Stars Remain" and "End of Summer" and next week will have Jane Cowl in "First Lady," after that Arthur Hopkins production of "Plumes in the Dust," starring Henry Hull, and then "Ethan Frome." That adds up to one panorama of biographical vignettes of Napoleon's last years in exile, three comedies and two serious dramas. But where is the music?

There must be a musical show somewhere on the horizon. Has anyone heard precisely where, or when it may be expected to come to town?

As the man said during prohibition, when he had to order a "cup of tea" to get a shot of hootch, "the old order changeth!"

• • • •

When Raymond Massey, who appeared in the leading male role of "Ethan Frome" during its New York run, was in Washington some months ago in connection, it seems to a faulty memory, with the premiere of the film version of H. G. Wells' "Things to Come," in which he also played the stellar role, he was sure then the dramatization of the Edith Wharton novel would not take to the road. Nevertheless, here comes "Ethan Frome," booked for the week of November 2, at the National.

Mr. Massey, however, will not be in the cast when the play reaches the local boards. The Max Gordon road company for the tour of the play has Pauline Lord and Earl Larrimore as its principals.

Mr. Larrimore has not been seen in Washington, I believe, since he created the part of the Chinese farmer opposite Mme. Alla Nazimova in the Theater Guild's dramatization of Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth;" Miss Lord not since "Distant Drums," an indeterminate essay at psychological drama in the Indian country, which had its premiere in the Belasco Theater seasons back.

• • • •

Although not subjected to the destructive measures that were invoked in the case of "Ecstasy," when it first was imported to this country, "Marie," or "Spring Shower"—the film for some reason bears two names—booked to open an engagement in the Belasco Theater on Tuesday of next week, has encountered difficulties with the consorship boards of at least two States. It has been banned in New York and also in Pennsylvania.

The picture is reputed to be a masterpiece of realistic drama, having been a prize-winner of some kind or other in Hungary, where it was made. The reason for its condemnation is said to rest in the fact that a baby born out of wedlock plays a vital part in the motivation of the story. Censors, one is led to believe—although the whole structure of censorship is anathema to the American sense of justice—must perforce, enforce the letter, rather than the spirit, of the regulations that are laid before them for execution.

But this "Marie" or "Spring Shower" cannot be so bad. It was purchased first by Universal to be directed by Paul Fejos, who deserted the Laemmle camp when he was not permitted to direct "All Quiet on the Western Front." When he got back to his native Hungary, he acquired the story rights and made the picture there. It has been hailed a classic everywhere except in New York and Pennsylvania, where babies born out of wedlock are against the cinematic law.

• • • •

When Matty Radin, owner of the chain of theaters of which the Belasco forms a link; Irvin Shapiro, who owns "Spring Shower," and Jack Thoman, manager of the Belasco, paid their call to this desk Tuesday afternoon, it leaked out that following "Marie"—those two titles came in handy now and again—the feature at the Belasco will be the European version of "Les Miserables," which originally was produced as a trilogy. The three films now have been welded into one, requiring three hours of running time. It was directed by Charles Vanel, with Harry Bauer in the role of Jean Val Jean, and Armand Bernard in the part played on this side by Charles Laughton. This is the film that probably will be presented as a road-show attraction on the two-presentations-a-day basis.

Dots and Dashes.

On the night of Thursday, October 22, the Shoreham will conduct a straw vote on the matter of the Presidential campaign, with real society mannequins, in person, for ballots. This gay business will be held in the main ballroom . . . There is to be a press table and the election will be only three weeks away . . . About as close to a real vote for Landon or Roosevelt as the District will be able to get—worse luck . . . The "Selected Motion Pictures" brochure, distributed by the Will H. Hays organization, lists "The Devil Is a Sissy" as its "best of the month" in the issue of October 1 . . . It will reach Washington soon . . . Personal nomination for the column's most constant reader and most encouraging correspondent: Mrs. Annie J. Sucrow, of Wheaton, Md., who says it with daily postcards . . . Beginning Friday, the photographic best of some 200 of Washington's kodak amateurs will be on display in the lobby of Loew's Capitol Theater, under the sponsorship of the Master Photo Finishers of the District of Columbia . . . The exhibit will be on display for a full week . . . Speaking of Loew's, Ray Bell—no relation—head man of the publicity department, is back from that Bermuda outing . . . Happy, but broke! . . . Aren't we all? . . . Almost daily there arrives a new batch of Midwestern newspaper clippings from L. Stoddard Taylor, former manager of the Belasco, concerning the superlative merits of his touring play, "Lady Precious Stream" . . . Nice to hear from the old boy and know he's prospering . . . "That's all today, see you"—pardon, that's a couple of other fellows!

The Post's New Yorker

Revenge Is Had.

FOUR YEARS AGO George White, who wanted Ethel Merman's contract from Vinton & Freedly, paid $5,000 for it—although the producers had no show for her then. . . . When the "Scandals" flopped here last season, Freedley wanted the Howard brothers for his new show, "Red Hot and Blue." White's answer was to send "Scandals" on tour, because he has a run-of-the-play contract with the comics. It lost $5,000 in Atlantic City. Then a spell of bad weather in Chicago hurt receipts there, Freedley again asked for Willie and Eugene Howard. White wouldn't capitulate, and sent his show West. Strangely enough, it began to show a profit . . . 45,000 gross in Kansas City, $7,000 advance sale in Frisco, etc. . . . Freedley, in the meantime, had been postponing rehearsals for his new show. He finally called White. "You once paid $5,000 for Merman's contract," he proposed. "I'll satisfy you. I'll pay you 5,000 for the Howards." . . . White laughed, and has demanded $200,000—for that's how much he'll net when this road tour . . . the spite tour . . . is concluded!

IF DICK MERRILL can get time off from flying, he'll be booked into Chicago, Pittsburgh and Newark theaters. Eastern Air Lines, however, charged his ocean-hop off as a "vacation" . . . Jack Benny was Fred Astaire's guest star on the dancer's radio program recently. Now Benny has invited Astaire to guest-star for him—but Fred's sponsor won't allow it—on the ground that Packard and Jello don't mix.

IF ARDE BUOLVA'S $200,000-to-$100,000 bet on Roosevelt is covered, and if he wins, the watch manufacturer will donate his winnings to charity. . . . The Musicians' Union is organizing members of Stokowski's Orchestra to picket the Stanley Theater in Philadelphia. The picture there is "The Big Broadcast"—in which Stokowski and his orchestra appear! . . . Stokowski himself may join the picket line. . . . Ben Bernie and Rudy Vallee, as members of the Actors' Union, will be asked to cary picket signs also—to help bring back live entertainment. . . . Walter Huston's son, John, is the new drama critic for Mid-Week Pictorial. . . . Local Democratic clubs are planning to drape all their Al Smith pictures.

The Black Automatic

By William Byron Mowery.

CHAPTER 10.

Harla's hand on the leather-wrapped stick looked ridiculously small to be guiding a plane through the air at a hundred and forty an hour.

From stray bits of information last night at the dance, Noel knew almost exactly her motive for this Manitou trip. She and Jimmy had been very near to each other. Born and reared in northern Ontario, they had been orphaned in their teens, had run their father's trading post for a time, had gone away to school together, had stuck together till Jimmy tired of ablative absolutes and blew west.

Without question, Jimmy had written her about his secret; and when those unknowns began hounding him, he probably had written her about that, too. In alarm for him she had packed up instantly and started for the sub-Arctic. Those Dinokuis were merely a side issue; her main reason was this danger to her brother. Likely she was intending to make Jimmy drop his venture and get out of the North before he got killed.

By a matter of days she had come too late. Their very trails had crossed, somewhere in Saskatchewan or Manitoba, and neither had known of it. While she had been hurrying west to Edmonton and into the North, Jimmy had been flying east to Winnipeg and his anonymous grave.

With something of a jolt it came home to Noel that this girl sitting beside him had no relative on earth now and no understanding friend except his own self. In this whole huge country not one person, not even Harla herself, knew her situation or the dangers hovering over her or the tragedy that she was running headlong into. He alone knew. He alone could guard and protect her.

Last evening over that soda in the drug store, fate or hapchance or destiny had given this girl into his hands, as a sacred trust. Whatever happened between them in the days ahead, she was his to shield, and her claim on him came first. For Jimmy he could do nothing now except to exact revenge. But he could shield Harla and see that she came out of this alive. That he must do. The claim of the living was stronger than the claim of the dead.

Two hundred miles deep in the Grand Marais, he took over the controls again. A few minutes later, above a big lake with a rocky isle in the deep water center, he glanced down idly and watched the Diomede's shadow sweeping up across the flag beds along the west shore.

As he gazed at the shadow and the innumerable muskrat houses, his eyes suddenly picked up, on those flag beds far below, a sight that took him like a club blow.

Down yonder, trailing the shadow of his Diomede, came a second shadow, sweeping up across those flags, drawing nearer, closing in.

Out across the void a large, gray monoplane, less than 300 yards away was pouncing upon the Diomede at full-gunned roar.

In that moment of his staring at the gray plane he realized, in flashes quicker than thought, that something during the four hours past, somewhere back in the Athabasca country, his enemies had sighted the Diomede in spite of all his precautions. They had swung in behind, followed at a safe distance, and let him fly on and on into this wild Slave country where no human ever came. Now they were striking at him, to knock his little ship out of the air and send it plummeting downward into that slimy-green ooze where it would be lost till the end of time.

Before he could push the stick forward and dive, the gray craft opened on the little plane with a withering blast. Above the engine noise came a sinister ratt-tatt-tt-tt-tt. From a cowl trap in that gray ship's window leaped reddish spurts of fire, and the white smoking lines of tracer bullets came streaking across, gulding the aim of that enemy gunner.

A tattoo of sharp impacts struck the Diomede, beating against the wings and fuselage like violent hailstones. The ship lurched and wobbled crazily. In the window beside Noel the glass shattered to bits, and the cold slipstream swirled in like a deluge of icy water. Across the instrument board a row of neatly patterned little holes suddenly appeared, as though by magic, smashing compass and aneroid, scattering glass and splinters and bits of metal all over the cabin.

To dodge the gray annihilation swooping upon him and Harla, Noel knocked the throttle up to full revv, shoved the stick forward and went whisting downward in a giddy spiral dive.

His sudden maneuver shook the enemy craft. With its white tracers futilely trying to tilt down and catch him again, it roared over him, vanished like an evil apparition into a bank of woolpack; and for a few seconds it was lost to sight.

At 4,000 feet Noel came out of the long dive, managed to steady the careening plane and leveled it off. His first numbing shock had passed; he was thinking, trying to fight off the death overhead. If that plane closed in again and one of those smoking tracers hit a gas tank, the Diomede would be a mass of flames in a handful of seconds.

Gasping from fright and the breath-taking drop, Harla seized his arm.

"Noel! What happened?" The sudden appearance of the gray ship and the crashing suddenness of that machine-gun burst had stunned her. "Those men in that plane—were they trying to kill us?"

"Yes!" he jerked out, tight-lipped. A fury had seized him, was shaking him to his depths. Those wanton killers, turning a machine gun on a girl, an innocent girl, in order to get him—it was as brutal and cold-hearted as that mocking laugh when they had murdered her brother.

He kicked the Diomede around in a hairpin bank and headed west for the Slave River, for Fort James or Northumbria or any post he could make. With only a light rifle and a pocket automatic, he and Harla stood no chance against that withering machine gun. Their lives were a question of outdistancing that enemy plane to a post and human help.

Forty miles to the Slave, a hundred miles to Fort James—the speedy Diomede might make it.

"But—but who are those men?" Harla cried.

Noel reached for the gas-tank lever. "Enemies of mine!" He yanked at the lever, meaning to dump both wing tanks and lighten the little Diomede. The emergency tank would get him to Fort James. But the lever cable had been shot in two; the lever hung limp and useless; he was unable to dump the tanks.

As he shielded his eyes from the slipstream and looked westward for a glimpse of the Slave, the motor started coughing, sputtering; the revv needle began falling; the air speed dropped.

"Look up, see where that plane is!" he ordered Harla, fighting frantically with throttle and hand pump to keep the engine from going out. "D'you see those men anywhere?"

Harla pressed her face against the window and looked upward. "They're out of that cloud; they're almost straight overhead; they're slanting down in front of us. You'd better swing! They're coming fast, they're going to shoot at us again."

Noel kicked the sluggish Diomede around to dodge this second thrust.

With sinking heart he realized that the engine had been disabled and was going to konk, in spite of anything he could do. One of those bullets had punctured the feed line or hit some vital spot in the ignition. The motor was choking, the revv was falling away to nothing; the controls were dangerously limp and soggy. In a minute more he would have no engine at all.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 14.

EVERY NOW and then, for no particular reason, the hosts of Hollywood descend on this town in a body, and our glamor-hounds and autograph-chasers have just been passing through such a hysterical period. We have thus been faced with a long succession of what my poor spouse calls "canape-grabs" in honor of the visiting firemen from the coast. He makes his so-called "living" writing about movie actors, and huge cocktail free-for-alls always reduce him to a sad state, with heartburn, elbow-bending paralysis and spots before the eyes.

ALICE HUGHES.

These big parties, now customarily tossed in one of the fancy suites of the dear old Waldorf, give the film press a chance to turn up en masse, stuff themselves with the elegant food and drink provided by the thoughtful film companies, and usually ignore the guests of honor. Their chief function is to oil the the writer and give them a chance to talk shop. Paramount flang a whopper the other day. Among those present but not voting were Producer William Le Baron, Director Ernst Lubitsch, and Actors Margaret Perry, Karen Morley, Bill Frawley, Elizabeth Patterson, as well as clothes-designer Travis Banton. My alleged "helpmate" hasn't shown since.

• • • •

I went because there was a chance that the beauteous Gary Cooper would turn up, but he didn't, drat it. I also went because I like to mingle with the local posse of movie writers, who are the most blase, cynical lot of boys and girls on earth. They don't like much of anything, especially movie actors. And I also went to this one because the Paramount publicity girl, Aileen St. John Brenon, is one of Gotham's grandest people. She is the niece of old-time director Herbert Brenon, and the wife of Tom Craven, the charming man whose "Men of Art" and "Modern Art" have made him famous.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Just saw Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, my columning colleague, loping along Madison avenue, with that long stride of hers. Dressed all in black, with a wide-brimmed black hat. She looked very preoccupied, and why not? This is a pretty hectic month for Roosevelts.

• • • •

Our great shop windows hit a new high this fall in beauty and good taste—they are worth a trip to town to see. Window dressing has made enormous strides in the last few years, and the woman who can resist modern merchandise display is indeed tough stuff . . .

• • • •

I've a new maid named Mary who comes from Vienna and sounds precisely like Louise Rainer. Of course, she doesn't look like her, and a good thing, too, my "bread-winner" being a very susceptible old thing . . .

• • • • •

Among our curren' callers the 18-year-old screen star, Anne Shirley, who left here at the age of four to crash the films and hasn't been back since. She says the only thing that hasn't changed is Central Park. Anne, who was once called "Dawn O'Day"—no kidding—pulled a fast one on her company a few nights ago. She told them that she was sick in bed with a raging tonsil—which would have been all right save that I saw her leaving a stage door that night in the company of Richard Cromwell, also of the movies . . .

• • • •

Visitors to New York always identify themselves as such by asking the hotel elevator boy for "K-15" instead of merely the fifteenth floor. Just a thought for those gals who wish to be obscurely native when they come to town . . .

• • • •

We may not have many falling leaves to herald autumn on Manhattan, but we always know it's here because Dwight Fiske always turns up at some supper club to give out his slyly dirty songs. And here he is, on the dot, at the Savoy-Plaza!

• • • •

Well our womenfolk are squawking again, this time because their arms get tired doing the current coiffure rolls in their hair! The poor ducks!

These rolls are an interesting style, though not as flattering as longer bobs. They are forbidden in the movies, I'm told, as being too severe. The Glamor Girls go for a fluffy bob, which gives their pans a softer frame. But give me the rolls for neatness and chic—I'll rest my arms if needed. I note many braids, too, at present—and one of the neat tricks of the moment is to braid in ribbons to match the evening frock. Too ca-yoot!

Outfits Popular Among Men Feature Turbans, Says Expert Costumer.

By Malvina Lindsay.

IN THE LAND of never, never, most women would be not, as is popularly supposed, Cleopatras and Mae Wests, but tantebellum belles standing under magnolia trees. And most men harbor secret yearnings to wear diplomats' ribbons over their chests or to don turbans and become Persian pashas.

A wide experience in costuming New York's social elite for fancy dress events, including Beaux Arts and Opera balls and Elsa Maxwell's famous parties, has revealed these facts to Helen Virginia Meyer, fashion historian.

Since 1929, when she ceased being an interior decorator, Miss Meyer has been transforming debutantes, dowagers, brokers and bond salesmen into romantic figures of past eras. The last two years she won gold medals at the Beaux Arts balls for her designs.

The owner of a large collection of historical costumes, Miss Meyer has been exhibiting through the country a group of wedding gowns of the last 200 years. In Washington she has been doing costume research at the Smithsonian Institution. On her return to New York she will costume for the Velvet Ball of October 30.

Sentiment Predominating.

Romance is the eternal craving of the feminine heart, Miss Meyer has found. Both the august grande dame and the blase sophisticate, when they reach back into the past for fancy dress garb, prefer an era dripping with sentiment. Their favorite one is just before the Civil War, the period of the drop shoulder and the curl behind the ear. Incidentally Miss Meyer doesn't blame them.

"A pantalette is more attractive any day than a silken ankle," she says. "And as for black silk mittens—well nothing is so intriguing to a man as to touch the cool finger tips of a feminine hand encased in a black lace mitt."

Next to the antebellum era, women find their favorite costume inspiration in the reigns of Louis XIV and his immediate successors. They like to be Pompadours, Du Barrys, Marie Antoinettes — though strangely enough none ever appears as saintly and virtuous Mme. de Maintenons.

The costume party is growing rapidly in popularity both as a public and private form of entertainment, Miss Meyer reports. It enables its participants, she points out, to escape the staidness of formal evening affairs, puts them in a let-go-and-have-a-good-time mood and gives them wider range for choosing colorful and becoming attire.

Modern Prohibitions.

While Miss Meyer's activities as a designer and fashion historian are restricted largely to costume work, she has some definite ideas as to how women should and should not dress in the modern manner, especially for evening.

"Many women prefer white for evening dress," she said, "and this often leads to their becoming washouts. Two types look wonderful in white—the very tanned woman or the one with a milky skin and a virginal personality. Unless a woman is a very definite type she should avoid the white evening dress.

"The woman whose figure is not so good should wear black. It covers a multitude of bad lines. It also brings out the best in a figure. It is the one color for a woman whose wardrobe is limited.

"For evening, women should wear the color that makes them the happiest and brings out the warmth and expansiveness of their natures. How they feel in colors is more important than how they look. If red makes a woman feel devilish, she should by all means wear it."

Blue is a favorite with many New York society women according to Miss Meyer. "There is a shade of blue for every woman in the world," she says. "Greens are excellent for red-heads, she says, and blondes should lean toward yellow-green and brunettes toward blue-green."

Hats play a big part in feminine chic, believes Miss Meyer. She cites Mrs. Thomas Shevlin, jr., the former Mrs. Robert McAdoo, as being an ace wearer of hats as well as other clothes.

"Instead of wearing the type of hat that is in style, she chooses the type particularly adapted to her," said Miss Meyer. Her hats are always unusual, but never freakish. And she always wears them with dash.

Next to hats, gloves and shoes make the woman sartorically, according to Miss Meyer. "Smart hats and gloves cover up a multitude of $29.50 dresses," she said. "The most expensive economy in the world is that of hats, shoes and purses. It's wise investment in accessories that gives styles. And it's not necessarily a big investment. I've seen women spend thousands of dollars on their dress and still look as if they had left the kitchen sink."

On all of her quests after historical costumes, Helen Virginia Meyer, fashion historian, is accompanied by her pet monkey, Toby. Through watching his mistress make up models for costume events, Toby has lately developed a passion for lipstick and other adornment and has to be kept as far as possible from bureaus and dressing tables.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl 'Desperately in Love' With Married Man Twice Her Age Asks How to Cope With Situation.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been reading your column for a very long time and have profited by many of your suggestions to others. A problem has arisen in my life and although I think I know the correct solution, I would like to be sure before making my decision. I should appreciate your opinion, given some time soon, so that I may know what to do.

• • • •

I am 22 and desperately in love with a married man, who says he is in love with me. I am a Roman Catholic and until two years ago was a very good one, fulfilling every single obligation which the church requires. Well, when I started going with this man everything changed about. He is 22 years my senior but seems as if he were just my age. He never drinks or uses unbecoming language and is a gentleman in every respect. He is a prominent business man and is well thought of by all his business associates and others who know him.

• • • •

I am a graduate of a local high school and have attended college and business school. I am now employed and have been considered an employe of high moral character. But honestly, my conscious surely is hurting me. Never have I been in such a predicament. I love this man, and as I said before, he claims to love me but I don't believe it. His wife is very pretty. I think she loves him, but I am not sure. He seems to be afraid of her, as though she had some kind of string tied to him, other than the string of matrimony. He says he doesn't love her, nor has ever loved her; but if not, why did he marry her? I asked him that, and he said he felt sorry for her. That to me seems a very weak reason.

• • • •

They have been married ten years and she evidently thinks he loves her. Don't you think it is a terrible thing for him to pretend to love her if he really doesn't? When they are together they call each other "dear" and "honey," which certainly indicates they must think something of each other.

• • • •

He is very jealous of me and hates to see me go out with other fellows. I stopped because I wanted to please him, but mainly because I had no desire to be with anyone but him. I am happy when I am with him, but my conscience is always on my trail, reminding me that I am doing wrong. I hate to give him up because I love him and am almost sure there will never be another.

• • • •

I am well thought of by all who know me, but if they knew the predicament I am in, I would be branded for life. Please give me some of your expert advice and I will thank you forever. (P. S.: The solution about which I spoke in the beginning is to give up this man regardless of the pain I will suffer. Seems like it will have to break sometime, so it may as well be now). Sincerely yours,

DESPERATE.

Break Off Relationship.

DEAR DESPERATE: Your conscience and common sense have dictated the right answer. The only solution of your problem is to break with the man—at once and irrevocably. He knows in his own heart that he is taking a terrifically unfair advantage of you. He has no intention of breaking with his wife. If he seems to be afraid of her, it is because he is afraid she might leave him if she knew what is afoot. He is a cheat and a fraud. He is unfaithful to his wife and he is unfaithful to you. He loves no one but himself. He lacks a sense of honor and a sense of fair play.

• • • •

It is bad enough for a young man free to marry to play fast and loose with a young girl's heart, but for a married man old enough to be her father to do the same thing, and with her reputation as well, is a crime for which there is no name. If the man really loved you he would do one of two things—he himself would take the initiative in breaking off the relationship, for your sake; or he would take immediate steps to put himself in a position where he was legally free to pay you court.

• • • •

He realizes far better than you the price he is making you pay for stolen rendezvous. In encouraging you to go against your conscience, he knows he is tampering with the mainspring and foundation stones of your spiritual life. In arousing emotions which can never find adequate release with or through him, he knows he is tampering with your nervous, psychic and mental life. In placing you on the defensive against society, he knows he is threatening you with the loss of self esteem, the respect of others and the reputation for moral integrity which is an indispensable asset to a woman's advancement in the professional and business worlds.

• • • •

In short, he is blandly and callously proceeding with a program which he knows can wreck your life in all its aspects. Such a man isn't worthy of love. The knowledge of that should sustain you through the ordeal you will necessarily face in throwing off his spell. If you are employed in his organization, try to get a job elsewhere. In the meanwhile, having nothing more to do with him. And tell him why you are breaking off. You may show him this column, if you like. It might help him to get a better perspective on himself and on his conduct.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problem. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The year 1881 will ever be memorable in the history of medical progress. In that year Pasteur showed that bacteria that had been killed—rendered nonvirulent—could and would confer immunity in certain diseases. The vaccine against anthrax thus prepared and injected into sheep made them invulnerable to the infection. Then came vaccination against chicken cholera, and it is little wonder that bacteriologists the world over anticipated that vaccines could be made that would protect the human family from all types of bacterial invasion.

But it was too good to be true. While vaccines and serums serve with marvelous efficiency in shielding the individual from specific maladies, those used in arthritis have not been as successful.

We must not think of an arthritis vaccines in the same class as that used to avoid smallpox, typhoid fever or scarlet fever. These are given to well patients in an effort to establish an immunity should the infection present itself. The attack on arthritis, however, is made after it has existed for months or years.

In our discussions of this crippling affliction (arthritis) much has been said about the importance of removing foci of infection. This means the extraction of diseased teeth, the elimination of infected tonsils and the drainage of sinuses filled with pus. The colon requires attention, as will the urinary tract, with its many hiding places for organisms.

In a recent report A. E. Greer details the results of the treatment of 50 patients with intravenous (directly into the blood) vaccines. Thirty-two were women and 18 were men, and the average age was approximately 41 years.

Greer makes one point emphatically—that the initial dose must be very tiny. He is positive in his statement that he found large doses not only unnecessary but injurious. Improvement was obtained in 44 of the 50 patients.

The conclusion appears obvious that vaccines are of substantial value in arthritis (the atrophic type) if given into a vein, as there is approximately a 50 per cent better chance for improvement. Furthermore, that small doses are more effective.

Child Chats

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"SOME DAY when I am gone and you look back over your behavior, you will be sorry for the way you acted. You will think, 'If only I had been kinder to her when she was alive!' But it will be too late."

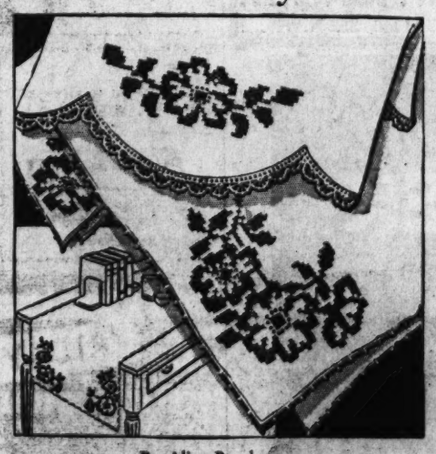
One can forgive old people for playing on emotions this way. A grandfather or grandmother, even one who treats a child to such an emotional orgy, has to be excused. They can no longer be changed, and they are apt to be rather tired. But it is not always old people who indulge in such sob stuff. Mothers are frequently guilty of it, and in them it is inexcusable.

A child should not be guided through his emotions, but through his reason. He will of himself yield to emotions quite often enough, without having them roused by his parents and teachers. The child who is constantly having his sympathies played upon either becomes nervous and hysterical or develops an extra skin for his feelings and grows calous. In neither case does the emotional appeal help.

There is cruelty in the parent who uses this means of training a child. He is deliberately hurting or trying to hurt the youngster in order to make him yield. If he can reduce the child to tears of remorse he is satisfied, forgetting entirely the mental suffering which has been the cause of the tears.

Many children are, without their parents knowing it, haunted by the fear of death. Many others are taught the fear of death by the short-sightedness of parents who are forever reminding them of it.

Rose Blooms in Cross Stitch Enhance Variety of Linens



By Alice Brooks.

Patter 5686.

HOW WOULD you like some realistic roses to further enhance those linens of yours? You'll be delighted with the simplicity of these cross stitch rose motifs, for it takes but little time to make them "bloom" on dresser scarf, table runner, towel or cloth. The accompanying color suggestions help you turn out some professional-looking needlework. In patter 5686 you will find a transfer pattern of two and two reverse motifs 6¼x8¼ inches; two and two reverse motifs 3¼x2¼ inches and two 3x8¾ inch motifs; illustrations of the stitches needed; material requirements; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 250 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Dog Training Is Easy

TO TRAIN your dog requires kindness, patience and persistence.

Until your dog has made progress in his new lessons let no one command him but you.

Give each new lesson a chance to become fixed before progressing to another.

The first lesson, of course, is, "Come here." Fewer dogs would be crushed under speeding wheels if they knew how to obey.

After this comes, "Sit down," "Speak," "Hush," etc.

To teach a dog to shake hands, first make him take his "sitting down" position. Squat down to his level. Tap him under the foreleg while you say, "Shake." When he raises his foot as the result of your tap, shake his paw and say, "Thank you." Also give him a bit of reward food.

Start with one foot and use the same foot until the lesson is learned. This training can be carried forward till you teach him the difference between right and left.

To teach "Hush," requires patience. Do not hush him except for idle yapping. When he starts yapping grasp him firmly around the mouth and command, "Hush!"

Learn from a trainer of famous movie dogs how to teach your dog all the tricks that endear him to you and your friends. Send for our 40-page booklet, "Facts About Pets." It will also tell you how to care for your tropical fish, canaries. How to train your cat. What to feed him and how to keep his coat beautiful.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Facts About Pets," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Aaron L. Ford to Marry Miss Castellow Today

Mississippi Representative, Daughter of Colleague to Wed in Evening Ceremony at Cuthbert, Ga.; Both Well Known in Capital Circles.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A wedding of wide interest in official circles will occur this evening in Cuthbert, Ga., where Miss Gertrude McDonald Castellow, daughter of Representative B. T. Castellow, of Cuthbert, will become the bride of Representative Aaron Lane Ford, of Ackerman, Miss., son of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Ford, of Potts Camp, Miss.

The ceremony will be performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. J. E. Hobson in the First Baptist Church there.

Large yellow chrysanthemums, palms, ferns and smilax will decorate the church and form the setting for the ceremony. The bride, whose father will give her in marriage, will wear a gown of pearl white satin, made on princess lines with leg-o'-mutton sleeves, a V-neck with a rose point lace collar and a full skirt, falling in a long train. A coronet of rose point lace will hold in place her veil of lace over tulle which will fall the full length of her train. A band of orange blossoms will circle it at the back of the head. She will carry a bouquet of orchids with a cascade of lilies of the valley.

Her matron of honor, Mrs. George McDonald, will wear a gown of beige lace with insets of brown net in the skirt and with cap sleeves of the same material. Her corsage will be of Franklin Roosevelt rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

Miss Rena Elizabeth Winslow, maid of honor, will wear a fuchsia moire gown, made on princess lines, with a full skirt and a short train, a large bow brought high in front, and a low-cut back. With it she will wear a rhinestone buckle in the back and a juliet cap formed of rhinestones. Her bouquet also will be of Franklin Roosevelt roses.

The bridesmaids will be Mrs. J. E. McDonald, Mrs. Walker Curtis, Miss Marguerite Holst, Miss Margaret Owen, Miss Josephine Reid and Miss Martha Sale. All will be dressed in fuchsia frocks, like that of the maid of honor, with caps like hers and their bouquets will be of the same kind of roses.

Little Miss Sara Susan Gunn will be the ring bearer, wearing a long princess dress of gold taffeta with a juliet cap of rhinestones, and Master William Gus Elliott will act as train bearer, wearing a short white satin suit and white shoes.

Mr. H. C. Ford, of New Albany, Miss., will serve as best man. The ushers will be the bridegroom's colleagues: Representatives Dan R. McGehee, of Meadville, Miss.; William M. Colmer, of Pascagoula, Miss.; Aubert C. Dunn, of Meridian, Miss.; Hugh Peterson, of Ailey, Ga.; Robert Ramspeck, of Atlanta, Ga., and Emmett Owen, of Griffin, Ga.; also Mr. Tibor Molnar, Mr. John M. Gunn, Mr. N. M. Walker and Mr. Emory C. Teel.

A reception at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. George McDonald, will follow the ceremony. The house will be decorated with palms, ferns, smilax and a profusion of yellow roses, gladioli and dahlias in shades of yellow and fuchsia. Assisting at the reception will be Mrs. Emilie Suarez, Mrs. J. M. Gunn, Miss Miriam McDonald, Mrs. J. S. Davis, Mrs. C. O. Johnson, Mrs. E. C. Teel, Mrs. A. K. Walker, Mrs. A. C. Moye, Mrs. C. B. Elliott, Miss Elizabeth Gay, Miss Doris Patterson, Mrs. R. E. Toombs and Mrs. Maude Simpson.

The bridal couple will leave after the reception for a wedding trip to California. The bride's traveling costume will be a light-weight green suit with a gold lame blouse and a three-quarter tunic coat of the green material, with which she will wear brown accessories and a brown velour visor hat.

Representative Ford and his bride will return from the West to reside in Ackerman, Miss., and Washington. Both have a wide circle of friends in the Capital. The bride has acted as official hostess for her father during his term in Congress and received part of her education here, having been graduated from George Washington University.

Engleharts Plan Winter Wedding

Daughter of Army Officer, Capt. Riggs of 12th Field Reserves Engaged.

Lieut. and Mrs. Francis A. Englehart, of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Imogen Elizabeth Englehart, to Capt. George Overton Riggs, Twelfth Field Artillery (Reserve), son of Col. and Mrs. Kerr T. Riggs, of Fort Brown, Tex.

Both are recent residents of Washington, Miss Englehart having lived here from 1929 to 1933 while her father was on duty in the War Department, and Capt. Riggs having been engaged in brokerage and with the National Recovery Administration, from 1931 to 1935.

No definite date has been set for the wedding, which will take place in San Antonio during the winter.

Mrs. Ward Will Sail Today for Year Abroad

An interesting year abroad is planned by Mrs. Chester Ward, wife of Prof. Ward of George Washington University. She is sailing today from Baltimore for Paris and will spend the winter taking graduate work at the Sorbonne under Prof. Emile Legouis. In the spring she will be joined by Prof. Ward, who is a member of the law faculty of George Washington.

They expect to go to Germany, Italy and England, in time for the coronation, and to return to Washington late in August or early in September.

Culbertson to Speak.

Mr. William E. Culbertson, former Ambassador to Chile, will be a guest speaker at the Sunflower luncheon to be held at the Mayflower at 1 p. m. today under auspices of the women's division of the Landon and Knox Campaign Club. Other speakers will be Mrs. Worthington Scranton, national commiteewoman for Pennsylvania, Mr. H. L. McCormick, and Mr. Walter Johnson, famous baseball player.

C. Bradley, at their home.

Justice Halse-Rogers, Family Guests of British Embassy Aid

Australian Supreme Court Member Traveled From Sydney to Attend Rites at Harvard; Diplomatic Corps Represented at Dinner Given by Naval Attache.

The Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. F. C. Bradley entertained last evening at dinner in honor of Mr. Justice Halse-Rogers, of the Supreme Court of Australia; Mrs. Halse-Rogers and their two daughters, the Misses Judith and Lorraine Halse-Rogers, who have been here for several weeks, from their home in Sydney.

Others in the company included the First Secretary of Embassy, Mr. Philip Mainwaring Broadmead, and Miss Broadmead; the Counselor of the Hungarian Legation, Mr. Anthony de Balasy; the Secretary of the Legation of the Union of South Africa, Mr. Robert Webster, and Mrs. H. S. Howard, wife of Capt. Howard, U. S. N.

Mr. Justice Halse-Rogers came from Sydney to participate in the Harvard Tercentenary celebration. He also visited other leading Eastern universities and he and his wife and daughters have made trips to places of historic interest in New England and the South. They have been honored at social functions given for them both here and elsewhere during their stay in this country.

Capt. and Mrs. Bradley, who returned to Washington in August from a seven-week cross-continental motor tour on which they traveled 9,000 miles, have been spending the time quietly before the beginning of the social season.

Miss Osie L. Terrell Is Wed to Mr. Pickett

Miss Osie Lucille Terrell, daughter of Mrs. Lessie W. Terrell, and Mr. Gordon Pickett, of Washington, were married at 7 a. m. yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, 2268 Cathedral avenue. The Rev. Gove Johnson performed the ceremony, before members of the families and close friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Aubrey Terrell, wore a traveling suit of brown trimmed in green, a brown hat and a corsage of bride's roses. She had no attendants.

Taylors to Make Home In Charlottesville, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edward Taylor, who were married on Saturday at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, in Greenwood, Va., have left on a Southern cruise and will reside upon their return at the Altamont Apartments, in Charlottesville.

The bride, the former Miss Margaret Farwell Wayland, daughter of the late Mr. Robert Everett Wayland and the present Mrs. Daniel Edward Watson, of Crozet, Va., made her home in Washington until recently. Mr. Taylor is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. W. M. Taylor, of Chase City, Va.

The Merry Whirl

By MARYLYN.

Oh, what a mix up and tangle of red tape! The Chilean team members were expected to arrive here tomorrow for their residence and preparations for the Inter-American Horse Show, and everybody had been contacted to go down to meet them, diplomats, officials and those from riding circles. Then, a bomb dropped in the midst of the peaceful morning yesterday, when word came they were arriving today. So, while they are on the train coming nearer and nearer, Maj. Frank Whittaker is rushing about completing plans all over again.

Herrick Young is a most unusual person. For instance, some years ago, when in New York City and without any particular thing to occupy his time and attention, he thought it would be fun to try being a "jack of all trades," and was he? He sallied forth to an employment agency and announced he would tackle any job that would last more than four hours and would pay at least $5. One time he rode all morning on the elevated shepherding a small child whose parents were last-minute shopping and preparing to sail for Europe; another time he was a detective, then a bouncer (his 6-feet-4 would be good at this) and numerous other jobs he filled beautifully.

He has recently returned to this country from several years spent in Persia, where he has been on the faculty of the university. His answer to the question of why he happened to go to Persia in the first place, is almost unbelievable. It is cats—Persian cats. He always has liked them because of their utter independence, had several while in college and now owns eleven. So, having known and liked them, when the opportunity came to go to their native land he decided that it must be a charming place with such prepossessing representatives in the feline world.

* * * *

"Chella" Trucco, daughter of the Chilean Ambassador, wearing black with a tiny, peaked-crown hat of the same smartly somber shade touched up with a dash of scarlet, was dining and dancing at the Shoreham with Fernando Illanes of the embassy. They were there briefly before continuing on their merry round of places to go.

At last it has been decided Quetzalcoatl's name was entirely too difficult to pronounce. He was the one horse on the Mexican team, now training at Fort Myer, of whom nearly everyone spoke with merely a pointed finger and a mumbled jumble of sounds. However, Capt. Armando Villarreal and Capt. Francisco de la Rosa talked it over and came to the conclusion something had to be done about it and it was. Hence, Don Juan, was selected as the new name and the wise horse, who understands Mexican only, is puzzled.

About the riders. When they arrived here, four of them did not understand a single word of English, and now, every single one can carry on a conversation about anything you please. That is how quick their pick up is, no wonder they go in for jumping.

Margo Couzens Chewning left yesterday for Birmingham, Mich., after coming here to especially attend the Warrenton Horse Show last week with her sister, Betty Couzens. She had been urged to linger a while, but the hunting season at Meta Mora, Mich., is almost ready to start, and there are five hunters eagerly waiting to be shipped up there for the exciting weeks. Speaking of riding, young Billy has his own pony, and his 2-year-old sister, Margo Anne, believe it or not, also has started to ride.

We ran into Margo Chewning twice just before she left. At El Patio, on a large party, she was wearing a smart black evening gown with huge white puffed sleeves. The following afternoon she was attired in beige and dark brown, as she strolled north on Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. John Edward Fowler, mother of vivacious Dorothy Gould Fowler, and one of her friends were having tiffen when we saw them at the Mayflower. Mrs. Fowler had on a tan frock and dark accessories. (In those half lights the lounges all have adopted, we defy anyone to tell black from purple or brown.)

Nicholas Lely, of the Greek Legation, is taking himself off on a steamer from New York within a day or two for his distant home and a nice lengthy visit with his mother. Just before his departure his Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, gathered the other members of the legation together for a gay little informal dinner at the Shoreham. Strange as it would seem, the envoy had barely seated himself before the soft strains of the "Blue Danube Waltz" floated out. We understand that it is one of his favorite pieces.

Mrs. W. W. Howes not only is witty but loves to play jokes on people. The other evening a friend dropped in and was introduced to "Mr. Bowes." She noticed that there was something very familiar about the gentleman's face, and then decided that she had seen it in pictures and then to top off this discovery, heard Mrs. Howes address the guest as Maj. Bowes. Curiosity and excitement suddenly knew no bounds. There followed some explaining, when it finally came out that Maj. Bowes was really Walter Bowes and has often been mistaken for his (last) namesake on the air.

Mr. Greims to Wed Miss de Bronkart

Of interest to Washingtonians is the engagement of Miss Eugenie Hoyne de Bronkart, of Rye, N. Y., to Mr. James Gerard Greims, of Washington. The announcement was made by the former's father, Mr. Eugene de Bronkart, and her stepmother, Mrs. de Bronkart. The wedding will take place in the autumn.

Miss de Bronkart, a debutante of this season, is a granddaughter of the late Gustave Cudell de Bronkart, one-time Belgian Minister to the United States. Her great-grandfather, the late Thomas Hoyne, was one of the early settlers of Chicago and later became mayor of that city. She attended the Rye Country Day School and Asheley Hall in Charleston, S. C.

Mr. Greims was educated at Kings School, Stamford, Conn.; the Ridgefield (Conn.) School and Connecticut Agricultural College.

The Harold D. Cosbys On Nuptial Trip South

Mr. and Mrs. Harold D. Cosby, who were married Saturday at the Church of the Holy Comforter, are now on a wedding trip by motor in the South. On their return they will live in Washington.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Margaret Gwinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Gwinn, of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Cosby, of Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Are on Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Kendall, who were married Saturday in Kennebunkport, Me., are traveling through Maine and Canada and will soon go to Cleveland, Ohio, to make their home.

Mr. Kendall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wane Kendall of this city. He and his bride, who is the former Miss Florence Crochett Arnold, were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Frank Arnold.

Miss Wright and Mme. Clarat To View New Deal Activities

Will Leave Capital Shortly for Tennessee Valley to See Work Being Carried on There; Former Interested in Civic Theater Presentations.

By Dudley Harmon.

Miss Barbara Wright, one of the socially prominent Washingtonians who have been engaged in the activities of the New Deal, will be off shortly to see some of the projects of the Roosevelt Administration at first hand. With Mme. Claude Clarat, of Paris and Persia, the much-traveled daughter of Mrs. Hamilton Wright, will leave in a week or two for the Tennessee Valley, to see the work being carried on there.

Both Miss Wright and Mme. Clarat plan to take numerous photographs of the Norris dam and Knoxville settlement during their stay, and intend to write some articles giving their impressions. Miss Wright visited Mme. Clarat last year in Persia, during a tour of Europe and the Near East. They had originally planned to take an extensive trip to the West and Southwest, but Mme. Clarat became ill shortly after her arrival here and their plans were canceled.

While in Tennessee, the two expect to visit Mr. Alan Squire, recently of Washington. Several weeks ago he was appointed director of the new Academy of Fine Arts in Memphis, a cultural experiment launched as a semimunicipal development by this great railroad center of the South.

Miss Wright has been hard at work lately on plans for the new Civic Theater in which she and other young people here are interested. Their first production opens on Wednesday at the Wardman Park Theater, and already a large number of the socially prominent have reserved seats. Among those who have been taking an active part in the success of the project are Miss Elsie Ekengren, Miss Olivia Stokes and Miss Caroline Thompson, whose engagement to Mr. John Farr Simmons was recently announced.

When the first production, Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," opens next week, the programs will include the name of Mannix Walker, who has been rehearsing far into the night these past few weeks. Mr. Walker writes as amusingly as he acts, and one of his plays is now in the hands of a New York agent.

Wife of Counselor To Talk on Rumania

Mme. Dimitriu to Address Study Club Saturday.

Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, will wear an old Rumanian costume when she talks Saturday afternoon at the opening meeting of the Political Study Club at the Washington Club. Rumania will be her subject.

The costume is comprised of a red hand-loomed skirt woven of flax and silk and embroidered in gold and silver thread, an openwork peasant blouse of white heavily embroidered in red and a white "Marama," the traditional headdress of the married women.

Among the guests of honor will be Mrs. Ralph Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa; Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, wife of the Minister of Finland; Mme. Andre Popovici, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Rumania; Mme. Jorgen Galbe, wife of the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation; Mrs. F. C. Bradley, wife of the Naval Attache of the British Embassy; Mme. von Numers, wife of the Secretary of the Finnish Legation, and Mrs. John W. Bennett, wife of Judge Bennett.

Mrs. Tilman Parks, president of the club, will head the receiving line for the reception and tea which will follow Mme. Dimitriu's talk.

Mrs. Watson Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. Watson, of New York, have taken an apartment at the Roosevelt Hotel, where they will be until after elections. Mr. Watson is with the editorial staff of a New York newspaper.

Hull Will Head Pan American Union's Board

Capt. Alfaro Is Elected as Vice Chairman; de Alba Assistant Director.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday afternoon was unanimously elected chairman of the governing board of the Pan American Union. Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, ambassador from Ecuador, was named vice chairman.

The board elected Dr. Pedro de Alba assistant director to succeed Dr. E. Gil Borges, who retired several months ago to become minister of foreign affairs for Venezuela.

Dr. de Alba, a Mexican, has had a long career as a statesman, educator and diplomat in his native country. He is a graduate of the University of Mexico and has served as a deputy, as a senator and as president of the Mexican Senate. He also was Mexican delegate to the assembly of the League of Nations and to the International Labor Conference in 1934.

It was decided at the meeting yesterday to establish a center of inter-American bibliography at the Pan American Union. The center will attempt to co-ordinate bibliography work among libraries in North, Central and South America.

Martha Graham

Martha Graham, who made her debut at the National Theater four seasons ago, and three of her students were presented last evening at the King-Smith Playhouse, "underneath" the Shoreham Hotel, in a dance recital before an enthusiastic audience.

Speaking somewhat at length on the dance in general and on the so-called modernistic dancing in particular, Miss Graham later presented May O'Donnell, Sophie Maslow and Dorothy Byrd in a series of calisthenic movements which are the basis of the modern creations.

After nearly a half-hour of strenuous labor, the dancers came back to the stage to present several of their own numbers, utilizing the fundamentals previously exhibited.

Definite Forms Demonstrated.

Miss O'Donnell did "A Study in Archaic Movement," which, to these eyes, had little movement and less to suggest antiquity, and a number of greater celerity called "Sinister Proclamation," which was a bit more more sinister than proclaiming.

Two conceptions in a quasi-Russian motif—"In February He Died," "In April He Was Born"—were done by Miss Maslow, who here seemed to present and develop a very definite idea.

Miss Byrd contributed a number which, according to Accompanist Louis Hart, had its inception in present-day musical rhythms.

As examples of specialized training and body control, the recital was all that might be desired; as dancing, it did not seem quite to meet qualifications.

LOSE FAT THE EASY WAY

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers." If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat. (Adv't)

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

District Federation of Music Clubs presents Ben Jones in a piano recital Wednesday night at the Washington College of Music. Program: Prelude and Fugue in A minor (Bach-Liszt), Sonata in C major, Op. 53 (Beethoven), Prelude, Sarabande and Toccata (Debussy), Etude, Op. 15, No. 10 (Bortkievicz), Fantaisie-Impromptu (Chopin), Staccato Etude (Rubinstein.)

As is quite frequently the case with young pianists who have not acquired aplomb, Ben Jones lagged a little behind his possibilities during the first part of his recital. There was fleetness in his fingers for the Liszt transcription of Bach, but warmth was slow to creep into the tone, and the fugue had a rather geometrical coolness like the abstraction of a theorem.

A glow began to appear in the "Walsten" sontata, but it did not reach the intensity which this Beethoven poem demands. One missed the sombre moodiness which runs like an undercurrent beneath the flashing ripples of the first movement, and the depth of thought in the brief adagio. The performance was fluent but without eloquence, like a thoroughly memorized oration delivered without the conviction that carries auditors away with its vehemence. The final rondo, however, was the brilliant and soaring flight that it should be.

In the Debussy suite, "Pour le piano," Mr. Jones came into his assurance and played with the positive phrasing for which one had been waiting. There was nothing tentative about his readings, and his accents, both grave and aigue, were accurately placed. This was playing intelligently directed and alert in its search for the telling phrase and the significant shade of tonal expression.

The concluding group found the performer completely poised and in a persuasive state of mind. The Bortkievicz etude was admirably displayed with technical scintillance, the Chopin fantasy received its poetic meed in both tonal warmth and rhythmic flexibility, and even the faded salon tints of Rubinstein's staccato study took on fresh hues.

Ben Jones has a sound and dependable technique, and when he is absorbed in interpretation, he discloses interesting qualities. Not the least of these is a musicianly discrimination between artistry and mere virtuosity.

2 Liners Are Delayed As Man Swallows Teeth

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Because a steward swallowed his false teeth, two luxury liners hove to in mid-atlantic today to transfer the steward from the Europe-bound liner Berlin to the Europa, headed for New York.

The North German Lloyd Line, which operates the ships, said the transfer was made so that the steward, Emil Marquardt, could obtain quicker medical attention by being brought here.

The company said it did not know how much of his teeth Marquardt swallowed—the entire plate or only some bridgework.

Edith Maxwell Is Established In a New Home

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14. — Edith Maxwell, granted freedom on bond last month while awaiting retrial for the killing of her father, was established in a new home with other members of her family near Richmond today.

The 22-year-old Wise County school teacher, who won a new trial from the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals after being convicted and sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment for her father's murder, had been visiting friends near Richmond for several weeks.

The new home is on a farm in Chesterfield County, where Edith will live with her mother, Mrs. Trigg Maxwell; her two sisters, Anne Ruth, 17, and Mary Katherine, 13, and a brother, Earl Maxwell, who rented the place from A. T. Dotson, of Richmond. Dotson is a cousin of the Maxwells.

Miss Maxwell's second trial has been set for November 16 at the reopening of the Wise County Circuit Court. She was freed on $6,000 bail by Judge H. A. W. Sheen.

Reich's Colonies Need Stressed by Krosigk

Halle, Germany, Oct. 14 (AP).—Germany's urgent need for colonies was stressed here tonight by Finance Minister Schwerin Krosigk, who declared "we cannot abandon our demand that the problem of fair distribution of raw materials be attacked and solved, for this is the key for settlement of our colonial question."

Speakers Chosen For Church Forum

Stephen Raushenbush, chief investigator for the Nye committee on the munitions industry, will inaugurate the 1936 Thursday Evening Forums of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church tonight when he speaks on the subject "Munitions and World Peace." The meeting, to be held in the auditorium of the church at Chevy Chase Circle, will begin at 7:30.

In announcing the 1936 forum series, Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor, said that already the committee in charge had scheduled several prominent leaders in social, economic and political fields as speakers.

Elmer E. Rogers, assistant editor of publications and aid to the grand commander, Scottish Rite Masons, has been engaged to speak on October 22 on the subject "Implications of the Spanish Revolution for Religion and Democracy."

"Totalitarianism versus Democracy" is the subject selected by Dr. Joy Elmer Morgan for his address on the evening of October 29. Dr. Morgan, well-known in Washington educational circles, is director of publications of the National Education Association.

"Potato Stamps"

Before the episode of the tax-exempt "potato stamps" is allowed to go down in history we have a postscript to add. Two weeks ago, you will recall, the Treasury Department decided to destroy the remaining stamps. For the sake of keeping government records straight, before the stamps can be destroyed they must be counted and this counting is going on now.

There are 8,600,000 stamps supposed to be left and each sheet has to be counted separately to make sure that one or two stamps haven't been filched from the lower corners. Treasury officials will be surprised if they find all the sheets intact, but are determined to sign only for as many stamps as counted. If several hundred stamps are missing it will be up to the Department of Agriculture to square itself.

How it will do that is a problem. Since the stamps have no cash value the department cannot be charged for their loss, yet the stamps can't be written off either. And so the Department of Agriculture's balance sheets for 1936 may go down into the archives with the deficit item of so many "potato stamps never accounted for, value nothing."

Robert B. Downing, of Smithsonian Institution, is chairman of the Progress Board of Babcock's United Civil Service Employes.

Economy Victims

Who is going to get the ax when Congress starts economizing next year? This rather vital question is raised in the second issue of "Merit," official organ, of Babcock's new organization, out yesterday.

Babcock sees three possibilities:

First, that old-line civil service employes will be the ones to suffer, Congressional politicians being eager to save patronage and emergency agencies.

Second, that emergency agencies will be scrapped in entirety, leaving civil service employes who were in the service before the New Deal untouched.

Third, that employes of the various agencies will be either blanketed into the civil service or given a preference status that will result in a competition between them and the old civil service employes for the jobs that are retained.

Essentially, the aim of Congress should be to do nothing that will weaken the merit system, Babcock contends, and yet the Government does have a responsibility to the employes in emergency agencies who have served Uncle Sam faithfully. How is the happy compromise to be arrived at? This column will welcome letters from readers on the subject.

SEC Tickers

New York financial markets are more than 200 miles away, but the Securities and Exchange Commission has little difficulty in keeping its hand on the pulse of the market.

In a little room on the ninth floor of the SEC buildings are four tickers, three high-speed stock and bond tickers and a Dow-Jones news ticker. Through these tickers the SEC commissioners are kept as fully informed of financial market developments as any Wall Street broker.

"No admittance" is painted on the door of the ticker room, partly because some of the things that are done in the room are highly confidential and then SEC officials know how difficult it is for their employes to resist the urge to "drop in to see how the market was doing."

One ticker records stocks on the curb exchange, another, bond quotations, and the third, the stocks on the New York Stock Exchange. Generally the curb and bond tickers are watched over only casually, the ticker tape reels being filed for future reference and trend study. A constant watch, however, is maintained over the stock ticker.

The four clerks in the room compile five market bulletins daily for the commissioners, one 15 minutes after the opening of the market, the others at hourly intervals. Every day the activities of certain special stocks also are charted.

The names of these stocks are guarded as zealously as State secrets for Wall Street financiers would like very much to know which stocks the SEC is watching. Usually a dozen or more stocks are assigned the clerks, although the commission may be interested in only one or two.

2 Owners Win Long Battles For Rezoning

Apartment Rights in Massachusetts Ave. Area Granted.

Permission to Change Frontage Given in Columbia Road.

Proving the adage "perseverance wins," the District zoning commission yesterday granted two applicants that had been rejected nine and five times, respectively, in previous years.

The most controversial case involved the application of Miss Mary E. Patten to change property at 3122 Massachusetts avenue from residential "B" restricted to residential "C" so as to permit erection of an apartment house in the midst of one of the most expensive home sections in Washington. It had been denied five times previously.

The commission granted the application, but only in part, permitting rezoning of two of three lots, covering four-fifths of the property and the residence. Rezoning of the lot east of the line of the Patten house and adjacent to the palatial home of Larz Anderson was denied.

During the public hearng last week several retired rear admirals clashed over the proposed rezoning, and the Dupont Citizens Association registered its objection.

The commission also granted, with a slight condition, the application of Marie von Unschuld to rezone the frontage on the east side of 1646 and 1654 Columbia road. The application had been rejected nine times before this year.

Denied Nine Times.

Granting of this application, which was to change from residential "C" to first commercial "C" area, was made contingent upon the widening of the alley in the rear of two lots and applied only to the front of lot 802.

Altogether, the commission granted 12 applications, denied 13, deferred action on three, and two were withdrawn.

It was explained in connection with the Patten case that the residence could be converted into an apartment house, providing no serious alterations were made, even though the rezoning had not been approved in full.

The reason for this, it was said, lies in a court ruling that because of the unintentional omission of the word "hereafter" from published zoning regulations relating to "B" restricted areas any residence built before 1924, when the regulation was adopted, is exempt. The effect of the commission's ruling in the Patten case, consequently, was merely to permit use of an additional lot, now vacant.

Acting for the first time on applications for rezoning of alley property, the commission denied two and granted two, the fifth being withdrawn.

Other Permits Issued.

Other applications included:

Change from residential "A" restricted and unzoned to residential "B" restricted, square 1315 on line of Thirty-ninth and W streets, contingent upon the closing of Wyoming avenue and the asquisition of the rear of the tract by the United States for park purposes.

Change from residential "A" to "B" restricted, property on east side of Thirty-ninth street, north of Calvert street.

Change from residential "C" to first commercial "C," rear of 2548-50 Seventeenth street, except 10 feet in rear.

Change from residential "A" restricted to residential "A," property bounded by proposed Juniper street, Eastern avenue, Kalmia street and an alley.

Change from unzoned and first commercial "C" to residential "B" and from unzoned and residential "B" to first commercial "C," property fronting on Ingraham, Hamilton and North Capitol streets.

Change from second commercial "D" to residential "B" restricted, frontage on south side of Taylor street, from Eighth to Tenth streets, and on west side of Tenth street, between Taylor and Randolph streets northeast.

Change from residential "D" to first commercial "D," frontage of Third and C streets and Indiana avenue.

Alley rezoning applications granted:

Cauther & Slocum, Inc., rear of 1218 North Capitol street, for machine shop.

Parking lots were authorized at 500 Twentieth street northwest, at northeast corner of Tenth street and Maryland avenue southwest, although rezoning was denied.

Although an application for rezoning of property occupied by the Calvary Episcopal Church at Eleventh and G streets northeast was denied, a variance was granted permitting a small addition to the church.

20 Firemen Overcome by Gas As Blaze Damages Apartment

All, Given First Aid, Return to Their Posts in Fire on Adams Mill Road; Couple Refuses to Leave Pet Pekinese.

Twenty firemen, including Battalion Chief J. B. Watt, were partially overcome by gas fumes from a broken main as fire caused several thousand dollars damage to the Birmingham Apartments, 2611 Adams Mill road, late last night.

The main burst in the basement of the building just as the blaze, which started in the store room, had been brought under control.

All the victims, given first-aid on the scene, returned to their posts. Chief Watt was the most seriously affected. He was treated in an ambulance, and went back to his men.

Officials said they thought the fire had been started by a match, dropped in clothing in the store room. They questioned a young woman, who said she went into the basement to search for a costume she planned to wear to a Hallowe'en party.

The intense heat of the blaze melted six connections from gas meters, and gas escaping from them added to the danger momentarily. The gas company ordered the supply cut off until all danger was passed.

On the first and second floor several apartments were damaged by smoke and water.

While others fled to safety, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Kinter, who occupy a flat on the third floor, refused to leave their pet Pekinese dog. They calmly watched from their window the crowd of 500 and the firemen below.

Two alarms brought 15 pieces of apparatus and several police scout cars to the scene.

There was no official estimate of the damage.

Church Avoids Political Lines, Walsh Asserts

The hope that the public "will not conclude that the Catholic Church has taken a definite political stand in the controversy between the two major parties," was expressed last night by Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its School of Foreign Service.

Speaking before the District of Columbia Medical Society, Father Walsh said:

"Phominent ecclesiastics have publically aligned themselves with one or the other of the principal candidates, and are campaigning vigorously in a party sense.

"But two swallows do not make a spring and two clerical voices do not represent the 31,108 Catholic priests in the United States among whom you will doubtless find as much diversity of opinion in matters economic as exists in a similar number of educated minds in allied professional circles.

Father Walsh took as his topic "Democracy's Reply to Socialism."

There is no divine guarantee of immunity against social upheaval, "no matter what the Bourbons of complacency may opine," Father Walsh said.

"If the menace of communism has not yet assumed in the United States the formidable proportions it has developed in Europe, that is not proof that it may not develop here," said Father Walsh.

"He would be a reckless physician who would needlessly expose his patients to smallpox because he was confident of their ability to resist the germ," he continued.

"A similar obligation devolves on public authorities and leaders in education and democracy."

Father Walsh asserted that every well-informed mind was aware of the "age-old conflict between freedom and responsibility."

"It antedates Franklin Roosevelt and a Democratic administration," he said.

Russia Is Lone Haven for Jews, Rabbi Declares

A discussion of economic and political conditions of Jews in various countries featured the symposium at the Jewish Community Center last night.

In a keynote address by Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the District Zionist Organization, a graphic picture was portrayed of anti-Semitism in Europe.

"To survive, the Jew must assimilate," Rabbi Breslau said. "Else he must submit to the torture and the rack. In the night that is now Europe, world Jewry can no longer look for the needed spiritual leadership it seeks."

The speaker scored Poland for its "deliberate persecution" of the Jews. He charged that minorities in Warsaw were starving economically under the stern fiat—"submit or face extinction."

"There is one country, though," Rabbi Breslau stated, "where, politically, Jews have an equal footing under the law. That is the Soviet Union."

Russia does not tolerate a Zionist movement, he said. There, Hebrew is dead, and though the synagogues are open, Jewish cultural life is long prostrated or extinct.

"Yiddish, however, as a language, is recognized by the Soviet government," Breslau amended, stating that there are schools "where you may learn Yiddish if you so desire. But even there you must teach the Russian language."

Politically, there are no limitations, no walk of life that is barred to the Jew, Breslau said.

Other speakers included I. S. Turover, vice president of the Jewish Community Center; Mrs. William Bralove, Jewish newspaper syndicate correspondent, and Mrs. S. A. Wiseman, vice president of Hadassah, women's Zionist organization. All have recently returned from Europe. They gave their impressions of the Jewish political situation abroad.

Trade Board Hears Talks On D. C. Ills

Criminal Justice, Traffic Safety and Prices Are Subjects.

Dr. Moulton, Col. Crawford, J. M. Hepbron and Eugene Meyer Speak.

Washington business men turned out 1,200 strong at the first fall meeting of the Washington Board of Trade last night to hear a panel of distinguished speakers emphasize the importance of governmental and business reforms.

Administration of criminal justice, traffic safety and the influences of wage-price ratios on economic recovery were among the subjects discussed by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution; James M. Hepbron, acting director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association; Col. L. C. Crawford, chairman of the board's traffic safety committee, and Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post.

Moulton urged business men to resist the temptation to increase prices when it appears the traffic would bear it, and said that if industry and business would co-operate in reducing prices as fast as technological improvements were perfected, "we will be on our way to more enduring recovery than we have ever known."

Price Trends Noted.

"One of the most encouraging facts of the present recovery movement," Moulton declared, "has been its failure to generate sharply rising prices."

Pointing out that the United States has had a "very sustained degree of recovery since 1933," Moulton noted that prices after rising sharply under the NRA, had largely remained stationary while wages increased slightly and profits increased steadily.

Moulton told the business men they no longer could depend upon an increasing population to expand their markets and that they must concentrate upon intensifying distribution in existing markets. This must be done, he said, by raising the standard of living.

"The standard of living of industrial workers can be raised only by changing the ratio between prices and wages," Moulton asserted.

The most satisfactory method of accomplishing this, he said, is by reducing prices without lowering wage levels.

Traffic Discussed.

After Hepbron and Meyer had told of plans of the Washington Criminal Justice Commission to increase the efficiency of the District law enforcement agencies, Edgar Morris, president of the board, said:

"Mr. Hepbron and Mr. Meyer, you have the indorsement of the Washington Board of Trade. We are with you 100 per cent."

Traffic and the administration of criminal justice are two of the most important problems facing modern cities, Meyer told the board. While Washington's record in handling these problems is not the worst in the country, "it is nothing to be proud of," he said.

Emphasizing the need for increased efficiency in government, he stated:

"The Government wastes more money through inefficiency than could ever be attributed to the deficiencies of private business.

"If the Government wants to prove to businessmen that it knows ways of doing things better than they do, it should show it can conduct its own business better."

Declaring he would like to see the Federal Government, through Congress, lay down a yardstick for good government in its supervision over local affairs, Meyer told the board that Washington citizens want their city to be one they can be proud of.

Hepbron Praised.

In introducing Hepbron, Meyer said he is one of the most public spirited and competent men I have met in public life."

Hepbron told the board "a city usually gets the kind of administration of criminal justice it wants and deserves."

He related how an aroused citizenry in Baltimore formed a criminal justice commission 13 years ago when police made only one arrest in every six serious crimes. Today, he said, one out of two serious crimes is solved.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association, Hepron explained, will not be a "head hunting" or a detective agency. Its purpose will be to study every law enforcement agency, gather accurate facts and, where it finds defects in the law enforcement agency, suggest improvements.

He reminded the board members that within a few days the association would make a public appeal for contributions to suport its work.

The members broke into applause when Col. Crawford took to task prominent men who use their influence to "fix" traffic charges against themselves or their friends.

"I believe prominent men who use their influence to "fix" traffic charges are guilty of aiding and abetting the killing and injury of innocent persons in traffic accidents," Col. Crawford said. "In the future let us step up and take our medicine when we face traffic charges."

District Mental Case Load Low, Gallinger Head Report Reveals

Despite the Capital's steady population growth and the fact that Washington is a convergence point for some of the most troublesome cranks, the last few years have produced no appreciable increase in the patient traffic of Gallinger Hospital's psychopathic ward.

This was revealed yesterday by Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist, who passes upon the fitness of all sent to the institution for mental observation.

During the fiscal year ended last June 30, only 3,091 men and women, white and colored, were admitted, the total being one of the lowest since Dr. Gilbert took charge five years ago. This figure includes alcoholics as well as mental cases.

The psychiatrist has no theory which presumes to account for the good mental behavior of Washingtonians and others who come here. Perhaps it is due to the superior living standards which are supposed to mark the District resident, lack of factories, security of Government job holders or something else but Dr. Gilbert only cites the figures and allows others to form conclusions.

All but five of the 24 classifications of mental disorders were treated in the Gallinger psychopathic ward last year. Of the 3,091 persons admitted, it was found necessary to send only 616 to St. Elizabeths Hospital. The others were discharged after periods of treatment ranging from one or two days to several months.

The ward has a serious space problem, even if it is not as acute as the one faced by the hospital's other units, Dr. Gilbert declared. The white male ward is crowded all the time, he said, and it is impossible to keep alcoholics isolated from the mental cases as should be done.

Penal School Merger Faces New Study

D. C. Welfare Officials Agree to Consider Legislation.

District welfare officials yesterday agreed to give further study to a proposal to consolidate corrective and penal institutions for children in Washington and to abolish the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin avenue after an executive conference with the United States Budget Bureau.

The plan urged by Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, is to transfer the boy and girl inmates at the Industrial Home School, where dependent, problem, and backward children are committed by the Welfare Board, to the National Training School for Boys and the National Training School for Girls, respectively, where delinquent children are sent by courts.

Although several of the welfare officials had stated previously that such a merger of institutions would be contrary to modern theory of child welfare, not one of the dozen or more who participated in the conference raised a protest against the Budget Bureau's proposal.

To Consider Legislation.

Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Welfare Board, Elwood Street, director of public welfare, and other executives of the welfare department agreed to study the problem further with the idea of drafting legislation to effect the merger.

The only basis of objection to the Budget Bureau's proposal, it is understood, was that it might prove expensive for the District to assume control of the National Training School for Boys on Bladensburg road northeast, now under jurisdiction of the Justice Department. This change in administration was a part of the consolidation plan.

The welfare officials did, however, raise objections to a less serious Budget Bureau suggestion, that is, that the proposed new dormitory cottages at the National Training School for Girls be made large enough to provide private rooms for 24 girls instead of 12 as desired by the District board.

Dr. Carrie W. Smith, superintendent of the girl's institution, insisted that the smaller cottages are preferable so that the more hardened inmates may be separated from the first offenders.

Regarding the proposed transfer of the boys at the Industrial Home School to the National Training School for Boys, the District officials pointed out that there are now only 16 vacant beds at the latter, whereas there are some 90 boys at the former.

However, if the school is placed under District jurisdiction and the inmates sent from the States are removed, there will be about 125 vacant beds.

Navy, 6-5 Underdog, Drills on Defense for Yale 'Battle Royal'

Eli Backfield Better; Lines On a Par

Hamilton Works Squad in Needed Defensive Fundamentals.

By Dillon Graham,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14.—Behind high canvas walls that shielded its practice from any Eli Scout and even from midshipmen themselves, Navy's blue-jerseyed football team prepared today for its "crucial" game Saturday against Yale.

Uniformed Marines stalked in front of the entrances, recognizing no password into the secret drill.

The Middies and their coach, handsome young Lieut. Tom Hamilton, realize the battle with Yale very likely will prove the "make-or-break" game for the Tars.

Navy fans were cheered today by news that Irwin Fike, first-string end of last year who has been out with injuries suffered in preseason practice, probably will start Saturday. Fike, Navy's extra-point kicker, teamed last year with Archie Soucek.

Yale Tricky, Says Hamilton.

"It's going to be a swell battle," Hamilton said. "Yale is stronger than a year ago, and plenty tricky, but we hope to give them a fight.

"It looks like a battle royal between two good lines."

Smooth-faced midshipmen and stubby-chinned old salts around this ancient bayside town compared the rivals on the basis of gossip drifting down from New Haven.

The two lines, they have heard, are about on a par, and the reserve strength also is even-stephen.

Yale has an edge in kicking.

As to the aerial game, some of the curbstone debaters shake their heads.

Pass defense has been the weakest link in Navy's chain. Each of the four touchdowns scored on the Middies this year sailed through the air.

Only last week Virginia connected with more than 50 per cent of its tosses, 11 of 20, and shot two for touchdowns. However, the Sailors intercepted five.

Yale's "batting average" on passes is better than .333. The've thrown 30 and completed 12. It was a pass that whipped Penn last week.

Yale Scrimmages Under Floodlights

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 14.—Yale brought out the white ball and practiced under the arc lights at Anthony Thompson Field yesterday as intensive preparations for the Navy game at Baltimore Saturday were begun. After the line and backs had rehearsed defensive tactics against Navy plays as demonstrated by two gray teams for more than an hour, they were assembled for an offensive scrimmage that lasted until nearly 6 o'clock.

Coach Ducky Pond started a blue team in that scrimmage composed of his first line and his second backfield. Capt. Larry Kelley and Bob Carey played the ends, Bill John and Fred Peterson, the tackles, Jack Wright and Jeff Snavely, the guards, Bob Beckwith, center, Charlie Ewart, quarterback, Billy Albinger and Bud Humphrey, and Tony Mott, fullback.

Bud Humphrey opened the scoring when he plunged for a touchdown within three minutes after play was begun. Tony Mott kicked the extra point from placement. Kicking off and punting were eliminated from the scrimmage. President James Angell was an interested spectator for the first time this year.

Frank Case May Be Out Of Game Saturday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14.—Navy people are uneasy over the announcement that Frank Case, field general of the eleven which is to meet Yale Saturday, may be unable to play on account of an injury in Virginia game, regarded as slight at the time. Case has been in the hospital for the last two days, but may report tomorrow. Should he be unable to play, his place will be taken by Art Franks, big Plebe tackle last year, who has been shifted to the backfield.

Wonder Whether They Built It on The 50-Yard Line

There's a jail in the stadium now.

"We've got room for about 25 people," Chief of Police Charles Kelley said. "I think that will be ample."

He said it would be used for incarceration of ticket scalpers, gate crashers, unlicensed peddlers and petty law breakers in general.

"Traffic is usually so heavy that we can't move the people we arrest," he explained.

Filly Wins Thrilling Stretch Duel in Laurel Feature Race

New Keeneland Track Opens Today

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 14.—Kentucky's Blue Grass region, whose rolling pastures lands dotted with luxurious, white barns carry an investment of some $30,000,000 for the breeding of thoroughbred horses, hails the return of the sport of kings tomorrow after a lapse of three years.

The elite of racers, jockeys and society will be on hand for the inaugural of the nine-day fall meeting at Keeneland, a new plant described by turfmen as a "model" for the sport.

Recently built on the outskirts of Lexington, Keeneland inherits the traditions of the old Kentucky Association track, dismantled last year. It is a nonprofit enterprise directed by men actively identified with racing. Any profits after the stock is retired will be applied toward improvements, increased purse offerings and stake endowments. Neither the stock nor life memberships will be for sale.

John Oliver (Jack) Keene, present master of the famous estate, broke first ground for the mile-and-sixteenth track 20 years ago. During boom times he started construction of the clubhouse. The depression halted the work. The organization which took it over attempted to follow out his plans as nearly as possible. The clubhouse is patterned after a feudal castle Keene saw in Russia, where he trained horses for the Czar. Scenic bluegrass pastures provide the setting.

An innovation in Kentucky racing will be Keeneland's use of the totalizator system of betting and the open paddock.

The boxholders, headed by Gov. A. B. Chandler, include the Wrights, the Hancocks, the Parrishes, the Camdens, the Gays, the Bairds, the Chinns, the Combs, the Masons, the Headleys, the Whitneys and the Piatts.

Pitt Announces Sellout For Notre Dame Game

Pittsburgh, Oct. 14 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh's football team meets Duquesne University Saturday in the city title series, but Coach Jock Sutherland's hardest job is keeping the Panthers' minds from wandering to the Notre Dame game October 24.

The Pitt office announced the Notre Dame game is a sellout and said over 75,000 have obtained tickets.

4 Indicted in $30,000 Carolina Race Hoax

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Three New Yorkers volunteered today to face a trial on race track swindling charges at Charleston, S. C., and were released by a United States commissioner on bail.

The complainant was Frederick C. Tuttle, former vice president of the Peters Cartridge Co., who allegedly lost $30,000 after winning supposed paper profits of $900,000 from a group which represented itself as a rich racing syndicate.

Four men were indicted in Charleston on charges. One is a fugitive.

Arrested here were Arthur Happenie and Frank Davis, each of whom was released on $5,000 bail, and Samuel Allen, whose bond was set at $3,000.

They were up on an extradition hearing. U. S. Commissioner Garrett Cotter declined to set $25,000 bail each as requested by Government attorneys.

The South Carolina indictment recites that the four men convinced Tuttle they had connections with the syndicate. When they showed him a $900,000 paper profit on the horses, the indictment said, they asked him to post part of a $400,000 purse to establish credit so the winnings could be collected.

Tuttle hurried to his home in Cincinnati, Ohio, obtained $30,000 and sped to Charleston with it.

The indictment recounts that the men then disappeared.

Government agents, acting on Tuttle's information, rounded up three men and now seek a fourth, believed to be in England.

Mexican Army Team Entered In Show

The Mexican Army team, which is to compete in the Inter-American horse show next week, will perform in the Capital area for the first time Saturday, when it takes part in the Redland Hunt's fifth annual horse show on the old fair grounds at Rockville, Md.

Thomas T. Mott, M. F. H. of the Redland Hunt, received assurances last night from officials of the Mexican team that the entire squad and the complete string of horses that will vie against Chile and the United States next week, will appear at Rockville.

It will be the first opportunity equestrian sports fans in the vicinity of Washington have ever had to watch a Mexican horse show team in action. They will perform in many of the nine classes that comprise the program.

Beautiful trophies are to be presented the winners in each class, while the usual ribbon awards also will be made. Post entries are to be taken in each event.

Greyhound Fails in Try To Set Trotting Mark

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 14 (AP).—Greyhound, champion trotting horse of the year, failed today in an attempt to better Peter Manning's record of 1:56¾. Greyhound, driven by S. F. Palin, of Indianapolis, flashed around the tract of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association in 1:57¼, tying his own record. Two running horses accompanied Greyhound as pacemakers.

Bill Guckeyson Won't Start in Virginia Tilt

Maryland's one-man riot, Bill Guckeyson, will not be in the starting line-up Saturday when the Terrapins kick-off to Virginia at Charlottesville in the annual game between the traditional rivals, Coach Frank Dobson said last night, but he is certain to see plenty of service before the contest ends.

Running wild against George Washington yesterday in a lengthy scrimmage, Guckeyson looks ready for the opening bell, but Dobson, pointing out that he has been in only three scrimmages since injured two weeks ago, doesn't think the boy can go the full distance. He isn't willing to gamble on having his ace suffer a reoccurence of the mysterious leg injury which for a time threatened to bring his gridiron career to an untimely finish.

Team Is Unchanged.

The same men who started against North Carolina last week will be in the backfield against the Cavaliers with Ellinger calling signals, Headley and "Jumbo Jim" Meade at halves, and Gormley, full.

One change has been made in the line, but it really isn't new, for Bob Walton ousted Frank DeArmey at center against North Carolina and the bulky DeArmey hasn't been able to get his job back. Unless Walton suffers a broken arm, or leg or some similar calamity, he looks like a fixture at the post even though weighing only 160 pounds.

Maryland will leave for the scene of combat Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock, traveling to Charlottesville on a special train. A large delegation of students and the band will accompany the team.

Little at Hot Springs.

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 14 (AP).—Lawson Little, former amateur champion of the United States and Great Britain; Jimmy Johnston and Horton Smith, will come here October 22 for an exhibition golf match with Nelson Long, Hot Springs professional, and record holder on the difficult Cascades course.

Balsamo Stops German Foe In First

Balsamo weighed 159¾ and Seelig 159½.

The German, hailed as one of the best 160-pounders in Europe, hit the deck three times before Referee Johnny Marto waved him to his corner after 1:04 of one-sided battling.

Balsamo didn't give the Teuton a chance to get started. Ripping in with the gong he cut loose with an attack that kept Seelig on the canvas almost continuously until the referee intervened.

The 5,000 spectators had scarcely settled themselves until Balsamo caught Seelig flush on the jaw with a punishing right and sent the invader down for a count of nine.

Seelig pulled himself to his feet in time to run squarely into another jolting right and another visit to the floor, this time for a count of five.

Dazed and groggy, he pulled himself erect. Balsamo was waiting with a left to the body followed by another right to the chin, which drove Seelig almost through the ropes. The timekeeper was intoning "three" when Marto halted the slaughter.

Glenn Morris Accepts Position With N. B. C.

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Glenn Morris, Colorado athlete who won the Olympic Decathlon title at Berlin in world record-breaking fashion, has given up his job as an auto salesman in Fort Collins to join the staff of the National Broadcasting Co. in New York.

Morris was assigned today to the department dealing with news and special events, including sports. He likely will affiliate with a New York club for the coming indoor season.

Mrs. Meckley Bows in Golf Title Play

Marion Brown Is Lone D. C. Survivor in Mid-Atlantic Tourney.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Elkridge Hunt Club, Baltimore, Oct. 14.—Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, the defending champion and co-medalist, was eliminated today in the second round of the Middle Atlantic women's golf championship.

Her conqueror was Elizabeth Janney, Green Spring Valley Club blonde, a pupil of Columbia's Fred McLeod. Miss Janney won, 4 and 3.

Two other Washington golfers were defeated, leaving only 18-year-old Marion Brown, of Manor, to carry on for the Nation's Capital.

Displaying championship golf, Miss Brown removed Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Leo Walper, of Kenwood, was put out by the three-time champion, Mrs. E. B. Morrow, of Elkridge, 7 and 6.

In a record marathon match, 19-year-old Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, eliminated Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, of Baltimore Country Club, on the twenty-third hole.

Miss Harper, who made a marvelous recovery from a trap on the fourth extra hole, and played a great iron on the next hole to win the match with a par 3, will meet Miss Brown in the lower bracket of tomorrow morning's semifinals.

In the upper bracket Mrs. Morrow will oppose Miss Janney.

Defeat Is Surprise.

Mrs. Meckley's defeat was a big surprise, but the District champion failed to match Miss Janney's short game and the Baltimorean's ability to sink putts consistently.

Miss Janney, whose game has improved tremendously since she started taking lessons from McLeod, got the jump on Mrs. Meckley when she won the first two holes—both tough par 5s—with pars. She stymied Betty on the fourth and went 3 up. Mrs. Meckley got her 4 on the fifth, won the hole, only to lose the seventh and eighth. A 5 on the ninth gave Mrs. Meckley the hole, and she reached the turn 3 down.

Miss Janney needed par in for an 81 when the match ended; Mrs. Meckley par in for an 83.

Miss Brown clicked beautifully, her irons going true to the pin on hole after hole. She had a run of five straight pars, starting with the second before a 5, where she overshot the green with her tee shot, stopped her par-stepping march.

Mrs. Morrow, who knows every blade of grass on this course, went out in 40 to become 3 up on Mrs. Walper, and was only 1 over par for the next four holes, each of which she won.

Mrs. Landra B. Platt, of Chevy Chase, defeated Mrs. Louise Bell, of Rodgers Forge, 3 and 2, in the consolations of the first flight, and Mrs. Bishop Hill, of Chevy Chase, defeated Mrs. H. J. Leinbach, of Baltimore, 6 and 5, in the second flight.

Abe Lyman Settles Suit for $500,000

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—A $500,000 damage suit filed by Abe Lyman, orchestra leader, against Charles (Pop) Foster, manager of Jimmy McLarnin, former welterweight champion, has been settled out of court, it was disclosed today in a notice filed in supreme court.

The basis of the settlement was not disclosed.

In his action, Lyman charged Foster with having acussed him and Jack Dempsey of conniving so that Lyman might win a $10,000 bet on a fight in which Barney Ross defeated McLarnin at the Polo Grounds, May 28, 1935.

Lyman charged that Foster told the New York State boxing commission a few days after the fight that when Dempsey, the referee, "went into the ring and raised Ross' hand, he made at least $10,000 for one of his pals," allegedly referring to Lyman. Lyman's suit charged Foster with "embracery and fraud."

Spurned by Dodgers

BABE RUTH.

Dodgers Won't Hire Lazzeri Or Ruth

Neither Will Any Other American Leaguer Get Job, Roars Owner.

New York, Oct. 14.—The Brooklyn Dodgers will not hire Babe Ruth, Tony Lazzeri or any other American League man to manage the team, Stephen W. McKeever, 81-year-old president of the club, said today.

"We have about 90 applications for the job, most of them from good men, and we ought to be able to get a good National Leaguer out of the lot," McKeever said.

Rumors circulated today that Lazzeri, veteran second baseman of the New York Yankees, was being considered as the successor to Casey Stengel, deposed manager of the Dodgers.

All Nonsense.

"That's nonsense," roared McKeever. "All this talk about Ruth or Lazzeri or any other American Leaguer getting the job is the bunk."

Ed Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, also discredited the Lazzeri rumor.

"That's up to manager Joe McCarthy, of course, but I don't think Tony would want to go and I'm sure McCarthy wouldn't want to let him go," he said.

Ruth, who left for Chester, N. Y., on a hunting trip today, insisted that he still was eager for a chance at the job.

"I think Brooklyn has the best franchise in the National League," said the Babe, "and I think I'd probably have more actual cash value there than anywhere else.

"That's a tough job to apply for. I don't know who to apply to, but they know I'm interested if they want me."

The Brooklyn situation continued to be consistent only in it's inconsistency. John Gorman, business manager of the club, said the new manager probably would be named around November 1. Judge McKeever said the announcement would be made at the annual baseball writers' dinner in New York early in February.

Arlington A. C. Downs Washington Cards, 7-6

Led by Halfback Via and the Smallwood brothers, the Arlington A. C., of Ballston, defeated the Washington Cardinals on the Ballston field yesterday by the score of 7 to 6.

The 1-point victory was assured when the Ballstonians scored in the first period and then held on to a 1-point lead after the Red Birds had scored in the third period, but failed to tie the score when their try for conversion failed.

Umpires

Should Work for Both Big Leagues, Thinks Jack Cuddy

By Jack Cuddy.
Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Oct. 14.—Why don't we have a central bureau of umpires in the major baseball leagues instead of having a separate set of umpires for each circuit?

I believe a central bureau of umpires is one of the greatest needs of the majors—a bureau centralized under Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis. It seems to me that such centralization would eliminate charges of preference in all-star and World Series games and give the umps a new lease on independence—the basis of an umpire's existence.

This palaver about umpires in the hot stove league apparently is a direct aftermath of the World Series, in which Cy Pfirman was accused of favoring the National League Giants when he called a ball on Bill Terry in the tenth inning of the fifth game of the series. Remember, Pitcher Pat Malone, of the Yanks, waddled up to the plate and insisted that his delivery was a strike—the third strike that would have put Terry and the Giants out for that inning. But Umpire Pfirman called it a ball. Then Terry walloped the next delivery for a long fly that brought in Dick Bartell with the winning run.

Pfirman was accused of favoritism because he was a senior circuit umpire. But this same Cy Pfirman was accused of bending backwards against his National League in 1928 when he ruled in the third game of the World Series that Pitcher Sherdel's throw against Babe Ruth, of the Yankees, was a "quick delivery"—that Sherdel's peg of the ball across the plate when Ruth was not looking was not a strike.

These are just two slants at one umpire of the 24 operating in the majors. I believe that if Pfirman worked out of a central bureau—having no connections with either league—he would not have been accused of favoritism. He might have been called dumb, stupid, etc., by fans whose team was set back by his decisions, but he would not have been charged with favoring a particular league—or with bending over at a 45-degree angle to escape such charges.

I believe it also would be better for umpires to be working out of a central office during the regular season when some of them become extremely unpopular in various cities on their circuit. If they could be shifted to another league at such times, it would be better for them, for the clubs, for the game and for the fans.

Under the present system we have 12 umpires in the National and 12 in the American working directly under the presidents of each league. Actually there are 13 in the American division, because Tommy Connolly is umpire in chief. But his duties are more of the inspection and scouting variety. The National League just now has no chief umpire because Charley Rigler died shortly after his appointment to that post last December. His successor will be named at the December National League meeting.

If the 24 umpires worked out of a central office under Commissioner Landis, they would not need worry about offending certain club owners in a league.

The Hero's Welcome Beginning To Pall on Cincinnati's Fischer

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 14.—Johnny Fischer is tired, fed up with the receptions, dinners and well-wishing that followed his victory in the National Amateur Golf tournament.

Almost since the day Johnny returned to Cincinnati with the beautiful cup that signified the championship, he's been hustled here and there; asked to say a few words to this group or that.

"I'm tired," he said, rather spontaneously today.

Never a talkative fellow, the 24-year-old son of a Cincinnati mail carrier expressed belief "it's about all over now."

"It has almost been harder than winning the title itself," he said.

There had been little time to study his law books—Fischer is a student in the University of Cincinnati College of Law—and almost no time to do the things he wanted to do. It's been one invitation after another. "Won't you do this" or "won't you do that."

The tall slender youth, with a mop of straight pompadour hair apologized for having failed to keep a twice-made appointment.

"I've been so busy I've had to pass up a lot of things I promised to do," he admitted.

Since returning to Cincinnati September 22, three days after winning the championship at Garden City, Long Island, Fischer has been the guest at two football games, a huge civic dinner given by the golf clubs of greater Cincinnati, a reception by each of a couple of clubs, and at a score of other functions. His family has seen him only between his dashes to this or that affair.

"It's all about over now, thank goodness," Johnny said. "Last night was the last for a while."

Houghton Wins 4th Maryland Open Golf Title With 139 Total

Mackenzie 2d By 1 Stroke; Spencer 3d

Victor's 68 in Morning Round Enables Him to Win $150 Prize.

Returning to the scene of his boyhood triumphs as amateur, Al Houghton, unattached District professional who shortly will become affiliated with the Bannockburn Golf Club, flashed some of his old time scoring power yesterday at Manor's course and won the Maryland Open Golf championship with a brilliant 36-hole total of 139.

It was Houghton's fourth Maryland Open crown. He won his first title four years ago, and repeated in 1933 and 1934.

Houghton's sparkling morning round of 68, two under par, enabled him to set the pace at the end of 18 holes, and in afternoon with Roland Mackenzie, Congressional Country Club professional, and Glenn Spencer, long-driving Baltimorean right on his heels, Houghton preferred to play careful golf rather than gamble with his shots.

Victory Worth $150.

The result was Houghton scored a 71, nosed out Mackenzie for the championship by the slim margin of one stroke, and covered the 36 holes in one under par.

Mackenzie, bidding for one of the bigger titles in this section, was a study in consistency as he posted rounds of 70 and 70 for a 140 total, even par.

Baltimoreans won the other two prizes. Spencer, pro at Strathmore's course, finished with 70—73—143, and Beach was next with 70—74—144. Spencer earned $50 and Beach $25.

Volney Burnett, Indian Spring's fighting fireman, with 74—73—147, and Spencer Overton, of Hillendale, Maryland amateur champion, with 72—75—147, tied for the low amateur prize. Spencer had a chance to clinch the simon-pure prize, but took a five on the home hole.

Rosslyn Girls Set D. C. Pin Record

Galt Davis' Rosslyn girls, champions of the Ladies District League, inscribed their names in the Capital's duckpin hall of fame last night at the Lucky Strike Alleys when an all-time record set of 1,750 to humble the Lucky Strike girls in three games. The new mark resulted from games of 549, 618 and 583.

The record pinfall succeeds one of 1,712 chalked up by Arcadia of the Ladies District League rolled in 1935, and keeps the record in the league, an honor they have held but three times since 1921.

Most unusual aspect of the new record was the way in which the whole team participated with no outstanding individual score. Blanche Wooton, youngest star of the Rosslyn five, who, within the past two years, has blossomed out as one of the District's foremost stars, led the champions with a brilliant 381 set. Lucy Rose followed with 355, Gladys Lynn with 347, Evelyn Ellis with 340 and Rena Levy with 327.

Rosslyn Takes Lead.

The team game of 618, chalked up in their middle game, takes its place as the third highest in the District. Columbia holds the record with a 625 game, rolled in 1933, and the King Pins are the runners-up with a 621 game, achieved in 1932.

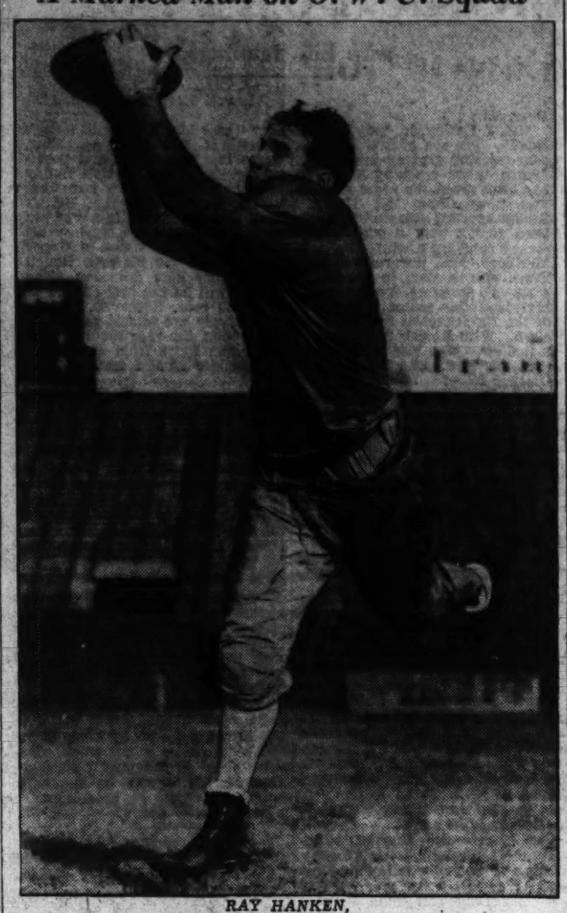
The match marked the second week of competition in the Ladies District League and the Rosslyn girls' decisive victory places them atop the group with six wins and no losses.

All other league matches resulted in odd-game decisions, Temple topping Highway Engineering; Georgetown, with Georgia Hayes shooting a 375 set toward a team game of 1,607, humbled Arcadia, and National Beer stopped Convention Hall and Swanee downed the R. E. A. Cleaners.

American Security No. 1 featured the activity in the Bankers League, setting the pace with a 589 game and 1,715 set. Francis, of Union Trust Co., led the individual scoring with a 144 game and 371 set.

In the Civic Club League, Bonnet (Civitan), with a 134 game, and J. Brown (Reciprocity), hitting for a 365 set, led the individual efforts while Kiwanis No. 2 annexed team laurels with 579 and 1,641.

A Marked Man on G. W. U. Squad



RAY HANKEN,
Converted from a halfback to an end by Coach Jim Pixlee this season, pictured in his new pass-catching specialty.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Mister Pete Marshall, who has been watching hoss races, man and boy, for 50 years now, allows as how there never was a greater hoss race than that mile-and-a-sixteenth affair at Pimlico in '30 when Equipoise won the Futurity.

I am willing to take Mister Marshall's word for it. Even now, far, far from the roaring crowd at the track, Mister Marshall is my favorite handicapper. Between tricks at his telegraph instrument he can riffle the pages of a form sheet, spend two minutes perusing the figures, and come up with more winners than any man I know.

Folks say Ol' Pete was the saddle boy for Paul Revere back in '79 and I am almost willing to believe that, too, 'cause Pete has dabbled with horses all his life and Pete goes back a long way. But the years haven't dimmed Pete's eye for a steed or the sixth sense that is required to reach a prerace for chart.

POVICH.

And so, when Mister Marshall says that that race back in '30 was the greatest race he ever did see, then I am not disputing Pete. Particularly, I am not disputing Mr. Marshall because Mr. Marshall is the most positive man in these parts and, in short, will not stand for any dispute.

Thus, when Mr. Marshall takes time out to turn his head, appraise the distance and relative position of the cuspidor 20 paces away, sends it spinning with a well-directed flood of rich brown tobacco fluid, and then begins to talk, I am listening.

"Absolutely last in the backstretch, that's what he was," began Mr. Marshall in the manner of a man who has an incredible tale to tell, "absolutely last, I mean. They were all out in front of him, Twenty Grand, Mate, Aegis, Tambour, B'ar Hunter and a couple of others—all good horses, too.

"They were running for $50,000 and that Workman had gone and let Equipoise leave him at the post. He was two lengths behind the seventh horse in an eight-horse race, and the rest of 'em were out there winging. Folks in the grandstand began to tear up their tickets on Equipoise, I'm telling you.

"At that, I guess it wasn't Workman's fault. That Equipoise always was a bad post actor. All of those Pennant colts out of the Whitney barn were bad post actors. Workman wasn't to blame like Loftus was the day Man o' War got beat at Saratoga by Upset. Man o' War was a beautiful post actor, just like a statue up there at the barrier. Loftus just fell asleep on the horse and Man o' War never could make the ground up.

"But you never saw nothing like the way that Equipoise began to run when he found his stride. He lit out after that field and those long strides of his'n were just eating up that ground. He was still last, though, at the half-mile post, but he was beginning to run.

"Mate was out in front, showing a liking for the mud. A couple of long shots were following the pace and Twenty Grand was keeping in contention. But Equipoise was running over horses. He picked up Backgammon and then Twenty Grand and at the three-quarter post he was fifth, with the bit in his teeth and still crying to run through all that mud.

"Workman made his move around that far turn. He went to the whip and Equipoise moved up like he was shot out of a cannon—out of a cannon. He collared Aegis and the only thing left in front of him was Mate which still looked like it was full of run.

"Well, Equipoise was second now, and Workman had gone to the whip. That Equipoise must have liked punishment, 'cause he began to fly when Workman banged him. But Mate was still in front halfway down the home stretch, and Twenty Grand was moving along nicely in fourth place.

"Then the hoss race really began. Workman had taken Equipoise to the outside, the only place he had racing room, and he was still beating him for a fare-the-well. Mate couldn't stand the gaff and folded. But there was Twenty Grand, which was not used up in the early running like Equipoise was, giving Workman's horse an awful battle for it.

"You never saw anything like it. Workman rode with one hand and pounded with the other and that Equipoise just bounced. Twenty Grand was a comparatively fresh horse, but even Twenty Grand couldn't stand that final charge of Equipoise and Workman and they get under the wire first by a neck. There was only one horse that could ever win that kind of a race and that was Equipoise. And there was only one jockey who could have gotten Equipoise home. That was Workman, the biggest little man who ever beat the daylights out of a hoss."

Arkansas Star May Not Play In G. W. Tilt

Visitors Have Many More Threats, However, for Game Tomorrow.

George Washington's squad breathed a trifle easier yesterday upon learning that Jack Robbins, the big pass and punt man from Arkansas, will not be in the starting line-up tomorrow night when the teams square off at Griffith Stadium, but only a little easier, for it may be a ruse, and the Colonials have no intention of getting caught flat footed.

Even if Robbins is out of action, there is little room for optimism on the G. W. bench, for the Razorbacks are still a potent array of grid talent blessed with an abundance of reserves to fill any breaches. With Robbins out the passing role probably will devolve on Bobbie Martin, blond ghost from Texarkana and senior halfback, or Jack Holt, 6-foot 3-inch fullback. Both are triple threaters.

One of Best Balanced.

Holt, a tackle in his high school days and all-State selection, is the team's outstanding punter and line crasher. His kicking average for three games played is a trifle over 50 yards and last season, his first of varsity competition, he hung up an average of 4 yards on every trip with the leather.

All things considered, Arkansas will present one of the best-balanced teams to show in the District this season. Coach Fred Thomsen lost five lettermen from the '35 combination by graduation, but in virtually every position he has candidates as good, and in some instances better, than the former occupants.

At end, for example, he lost two of the Southwest's finest wingmen in Jim Howell and Ike Poole, a loss that should have been a major calamity and would have been in 99 cases out of 100. But this year he turned up with Ray Hamilton, Bill Hunter and Jim Benton—all 6-footers and unusually good pass receivers who have made Razorback fans forget last year's regulars.

March, Nunez Head Tennis Rankings

Harry March, of Burroughs Playground, and Mike Nunez, of Montrose, head the boys' senior and junior tennis rankings of the playgrounds for the 1936 season, according to the ratings annuonced yesterday by Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds. March, towering young blond who graduated from Tech High in June and who is now attending the University of North Carolina, and Nunez won the singles tournaments in their respective classes this summer.

Gene Owens of Mitchell Park, Western High ace, again is ranked second in the senior division. Doyle Royal of Park View, sixth ranking junior last year, is third in the senior group.

It was simply a question of moving from the top of one list to the other for March, who rated the No. 1 position among the juniors last summer. Harry dominated the older division almost as easily as he did the juniors, although he was given a terrific three-set battle by Owens in the finals of the senior tournament.

Ratings were based on play in all the playgrounds' tourneys, including the doubles, mixed doubles and league competition, as well as the singles.

Seniors.

1. Harry March, Burroughs.
2. Gene Owens, Mitchell Park.
3. Doyle Royal, Park View.
4. Paul Falconer, Montrose.
5. Delwin Blue, Takoma Park.
6. John Cranston, Kingsman.
7. Howard Baer, Chevy Chase.
8. Richard Willmer, Mitchell Park.
9. Hop Lomax, Georgetown.
10. Bernard Blanken, Park View.

Juniors.

1. Manuel (Mike) Nunes, Montrose.
2. Leonard Sokol, Burroughs.
3. James Hardey, Burroughs.
4. Maurice Cowan, Mitchell Park.
5. Albert Gundersheimer, Hamilton.
6. Ken Dalby, Montrose.
7. Bob Richards, Virginia Avenue.
8. Francis Parker, Takoma Park.
9. Claude Du Teil, Twin Oaks.
10. Charles Brossard, Cooke.

Schedule Oyster Roast.

The annual oyster roast of the Potomac Boat Club, which will be a mixed affair, will be held Sunday, October 18, from noon until sundown.

This has been one of the club's traditions for many years, signifying the end of the boating season.

MEN PAST 40
Many men at 40, in perfect health, without an ache or pain, wonder why they aren't as strong and as vigorous as they were 5 or 10 years ago. Mental and physical fatigue is the cause in the majority of cases. Fortunately this condition can be helped by the use of a recently discovered hormone. This hormone stimulates the glandular system to greater activity—helps build up lowered vitality.
This hormone is now available, together with other valuable ingredients in Zo-ak Tablets (Blue Box for men—Orange Box for women) and are sold and recommended by Unit 9 Drug Stores and all chains. Zo-ak is the formula of a distinguished American physician who has written a booklet called "For Men Who Want to Live," a copy of which will be sent in a plain sealed envelope by Zo-ak Co., 56 W. 45th St., N. Y.

D.C. Pros Face Celtic Eleven Sunday

A rivalry as intense, if not as old, as the famed Mohawk-Apache feud of a decade ago, when fractured skulls and broken bones were the rule rather than the exception, will be resumed Sunday at Griffith Stadium, where the Washington Pros tangle with Alexandria's Celtics in the first Dixie League game played in Washington this season.

Victories over the Celtics last season, 10-0, in their last game, the Pros, formerly the Maryland Athletic Club, have visions of making it two in a row over their rivals. But Alexandria, just beginning to hit its stride as its 13-0 victory over Baltimore Oriole's last week indicates, have other ideas on the subject and seem to have the man power to put them into effect.

In a way it will be a battle between alumni of Maryland-Catholic University vs. George Washington. With the lone exception of Lee Carlin, former Colonial star and captain, the Pros' talent is drawn almost exclusively from Catholic and Maryland, with former Terrapins dominating the line-up.

Catholic U. Works Out In Secret for DePaul

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Catholic University's gridmen were not at home to visitors yesterday as they continued preparations for Saturday's important intersectional fray with De Paul with a lengthy workout behind locked and barred gates in the stadium. The wide open spaces of Killian Field have been used heretofor for practice, but Coach "Dutch" Bergman believes the place a little too open, especially just before an important battle.

One major change has been made in the line-up. "Dixie" Walker, the human whippet, replacing "Spec" Foley at quarterback, where an older and firmer hand is needed at the helm. Bergman is willing to sacrifice Foley's long-distance punting for an improved brand of field generalship which he feels Walker will supply. The kicking should not be noticeably affected, either, with Bob Makofske hitting 'em with the old gusto. Then there is Burke Vidnovic, the flashy sophomore, who wields a wicked brogan; "Irish" Carroll, the quintuplet-threater, and even Foley, who can be rushed into action on a moment's notice.

Uses Notre Dame Style.

In DePaul, Catholic will encounter another club functioning along Notre Dame lines with a balanced line and T backfield formation. Dr. Eddie Anderson, Holy Cross coach, formerly coached the Blue Demons, handing over the reins to Jimmy Kelly when he resigned, and Kelly carries on with little or no variations in the system. Kelly's men have brought in two victories in three games, winning over Dayton and St. Louis after dropping a 9-to-6 decision to Illinois in the last two minutes of play.

DePaul lost only one regular from its 1935 team, Max Fiske, the lad who tossed a pass to Bill Mullner, right end, who, in turn, scampered 55 yards for what proved to be the winning touchdown. Willy Phillips, left halfback, does the passing this year and is responsible for all the touchdowns scored by his mates. In Julian Heim, plunging fullback, the Westerners will show one of the finest ball carriers in that section. Heim does everything, but specializes in line bucks.

DePaul, incidentally, has a tackle who looks, acts and plays like Ed Karpowich, who captained Catholic last year. He is Hal Carlson, 6-foot 2-inch and 215-pound individual, who is rated one of the squad's outstanding linemen. None of the visitors' starting men are less than 6 feet tall, and their line will average 197 pounds to 193 for the Cardinals. They also have a pronounced advantage in the backfield, 183 pounds to 178.

St. John's Expects To Beat American

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 14.—Flushed with their two recent victories over Drexel Institute and Randolph-Macon, the St. Johns College eleven, of Annapolis, has strong reasons to believe that they will add a third to their string when they meet the American University Eagles on the home field Saturday at 2:30.

One of their best reasons is their defeat of the highly touted Randolph-Macon crew, who had not been stopped in their past 17 games. The Johnnies' triumph brought out a defensive ability, which has rendered less wintry the outlook of Coach Dutch Lentz, even though the backfield's lack of gumption on the offense is an added worry.

Hoyas Smother Bucknell Ace In Practice

Parade of Yearling Backs Take Terrific Beating in Role of Smith.

They are calling Georgetown's freshmen team the Black and Blues after yesterday's bruising scrimmage in which the yearlings demonstrated Bucknell plays against the varsity in a 2-hour workout that almost ended in wholesale resignations of the freshmen.

The trouble was caused by Stuart Smith, the big fullback around whom Bucknell's offense is built. That may sound funny, even ridiculous, for Smith was working out with his own team yesterday, up at Lewisburg, Pa. But Smith was at the bottom of it all because Jack Hagerty, anxious to impress upon his men the importance of stopping the Bucknell ace, picked out a freshman and said:

"Hey, son, now you get back here and run the ball this way." Then he showed the freshie how and where he wanted the ball carried. That was all right, too, but Hagerty double-crossed the lad. No sooner had he got the knack of imitating Smith in commendable fashion than Hagerty goes over to the other side—the varsity—and says:

"Now, when this Smith comes galloping around here you fellows go like this—bam. Knock him flat. I want you to put him down and keep him down. Remember, the only good Smith is a Smith lying flat on his back, especially if he plays football."

Well, the varsity caught on quicker than the freshmen "Smiths," and bammed the first so hard and often he had to quit. But they collared another freshie and made him a member of the Smith family until he, too, tired of the sport and quit. But the varsity got another, and another until they had five Smith brothers, all tired, battered, bruised and sick of football.

The varsity looked so good at stopping Smith it might be good strategy for Bucknell to keep him on the bench Saturday, because all the Hoyas know is that Smith must be stopped at all costs and stop him they will. Without a Smith running against them they would be in a fog—absolutely lost.

Jockey Kurtsinger In Auto Fatality

By the Associated Press.

Ossining, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Charles Kurtsinger, widely-known jockey who rode Twenty Grand to victory in the Kentucky Derby of 1931, was held for the Westchester grand jury today on a charge of "criminal negligence" in the operation of a motor vehicle alleged to have fatally injured Anna Ray, 49, Yonkers mill worker, on August 29.

Jockey Charles Kurtsinger ordered to appear before New York authorities tomorrow on a charge of having caused a woman's death in an automobile accident, was riding today at Laurel.

Zay Wins Laurel Feature in Courageous Duel With Silent Shot

Filly Regains Lost Lead Near End

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 14.—Zay, short on name and diminutive of stature, proved long on heart today in the running of the Grade B handicap which featured the program of the Maryland Fair, Inc.

Headed by Silent Shot in the stretch run after having fought a gallant fight to gain the lead, Zay came again in the closing strides to cause a camera finish which brought her the victory. It was a brilliant effort and one in which Apprentice Jockey K. McCombs shared the glory.

The little dark chestnut filly, operating in the green and white stripes of Mrs. R. H. Heighe, was a $5.40 favorite and she was applauded loudly even before the official placings were displayed. She ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:42 3-5, four-fifths of a second off the track record, held jointly by Pilate and Dark Hope. A crowd of 9,000 witnessed the action, with ideal racing weather prevailing.

A. C. Compton's Weston and Zay waged a keen battle for the lead after the field of five left the gate. Weston led Zay into the back stretch by a half-length margin. Cantine Lass was close up, while Silent Shot saved ground along the rail.

Swinging into the stretch, Weston stopped, but Zay found a new rival in Silent Shot, which skimmed the inside fence at the bend. The two then settled down to a furious duel. Silent Shot had a head advantage at the sixteenth pole, but Zay found new speed and collared her rival in the fleeting final yards.

Favorite Scored Opener.

Betty's Buddy, well-backed at a $6.80 mutuel, bounded away with the third race while running in the colors of Mrs. J. Bosley, jr., hacing a length and a quarter advantage over A. G. Vanderbilt's Gay Balko at the finish of the 6-furlong dash. Showabal, a briskly bet gelding from the J. H. Louchheim string, was a distant third in the field of eight.

Supremador, in the colors of the Foxcatcher Farm, scored a neck decision in the fourth race, defeating ten other juveniles at 6 furlongs. Supremador wore down the pace-setting Prairie Dog, of the Denemark entry, in the closing strides. Third money went to the Bomar Stable's Siam. Supremador was a "good thing" in the wagering and paid an $8.30 mutuel. Time for the race was 1:12 4-5.

Calumet Dick won the day's grade "C" handicap and matched Zay's time of 1:42 3-5 for 1 mile and 70 yards. The race, sixth on the program, proved a romp for the E. K. Bryson representative.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PUMICE STONE, $6.00, $3.90, $3.30; CANPRA (field), $11.90, $6.30; SIR ROSE, $5.70.

PUMICE STONE, forwardly placed from the start, shook off CHIEF HOLLIS and SIR ROSE to take command at the far turn, withstood a long drive to last ahead of CANPRA'S charge. The latter improved his position steadily, saved ground entering the stretch and came with a rush at the end. SIR ROSE was hard used while running with CHIEF HOLLIS and was tiring at the finish. LADY CARROT went evenly and had no excuses. BENGAY could not threaten. DEEP RUN closed willingly. CHIEF HOLLIS stopped, as did EXAGGERATION.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:06½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARIOLET, $25.00, $8.60, $5.60; FIRST PIGEON, $4.30, $2.90; PEPPER PATCH (field), $4.10.

MARIOLET, steadied along while within striking distance of the leaders, came between PEPPER PATCH and FIRST PIGEON in the final drive and under energetic handling, was drawing out at the end. FIRST PIGEON was rushed up on the outside to reach the leaders along the backstretch and fought it out willingly. PEPPER PATCH ran HARD CHASE into submission and was hard ridden throughout, tiring slightly in the closing 20 yards. SILVERY CLOUD moved forward midway of the backstretch and had speed in spots thereafter. TUNEFUL closed full of run. TIEMPO raced evenly. HARD CHASE stopped. SPARKY pulled up lame.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Springsteel. For 2-year-olds, foaled in Maryland. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:40½. Off at 2:48. Winner, Mrs. J. Bosley, jr.'s b. c. (2), by Bud Lerner—Nettle. Trained by E. Young. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BETTY'S BUDDY, $6.80, $3.30, $3.20; GAY BALKO (entry), $2.50, $2.20; SHOWABAL, $3.80.

BETTY'S BUDDY, smooth-running colt, was steadied along behind the pace of GAY BALKO, rallied sharply when put to a strong hand ride and was drawing away at the end. GAY BALKO, rushed up on the inside to take command in the opening furlong, was pressed hard throughout, finishing willingly but no match for the winner. SHOWABAL had to race betwene horses to the far turn and could not menace when clear. JOURNEY ON closed some ground in the late stages. IRREPRESSIBLE was pulled up when running in close quarters at the far turn and failed to rally thereafter. MAKALAW was kept in behind horses throughout.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $17.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:19½. Off at 3:26. Winner, Foxcatcher Farm's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUPREMADOR, $8.30, $6.30, $4.70; PRAIRIE DOG (entry), $6.20, $3.80; SIAM, $3.80.

SUPREMADOR, closest to the pace of PRAIRIE DOG from the beginning, came with good speed in the closing test while under vigorous handling and was up in the final strides. PRAIRIE DOG was steadied along after rushing to the front at once and closed willingly, but unable to resist the winner. SIAM broke poorly and had something taken out of him reaching contention. MR. CANRON saved ground entering the stretch. MALEMAN was rushed to the leaders and was tiring at the end. SUN PHANTOM came willingly at the close.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,100. Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:54. Off at 3:54½. Winner, Mrs. R. H. Heighe's dk. ch. f. (4), by Campfire—Zenoia. Trained by J. A. Boniface. Value to winner, $800; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:42 3-5, 1:38, 1:42 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ZAY, $5.40, $3.30, $2.20; SILENT SHOT, $5.50, $2.80; CANTINE LASS, $2.90.

ZAY shook off WESTON swinging for the stretch and came again under good handling to be up in the concluding strides after being headed by SILENT SHOT between calls in the stretch run. SILENT SHOT saved ground throughout, came through along rail to take command and fought it out courageously. CANTINE LASS, close up, showed a good even effort, but could not menace. BROWN FEATHERS failed to rally when put to drive. WESTON was used up setting the pace under hustling tactics.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:24½. Off at 4:24½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's dk. b. g. (4), by Gallant Fox—Martha Snow. Trained by H. Baker. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13, 1:38 1-5, 1:42 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CALUMET DICK, $4.40, $2.70, $2.40; WISE SISTER, $5.30, $3.50; CONQUER, $2.90.

CALUMET DICK, rated along while saving ground, came through on the inside to take command entering the stretch and disposed of WISE SISTER, to be taken in hand approaching the finish. WISE SISTER ran AMPERSAND into defeat and continued willingly under hand riding. CONQUER, within striking distance throughout, gained gradually on the outside during the final quarter. JIMMIE CABANISS could not threaten.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:54½. Off at 4:57½. *Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEVEN STAR, $3.80, $2.90, $2.50; COPPER TUBE, $10.30, $5.30; JUSTA FLIGHT, $3.80.

SEVEN STAR, steered out of trouble going to the first turn, moved up sharply into contention along the backstretch, came with good energy when placed to drive and was drawing away at the end. COPPER TUBE, outrun to the backstretch, went between horses to gain a forward position, but tired slightly after disposing of OUT OF FIRE. JUSTA FLIGHT gained steadily throughout the running. THE SWAGMAN came with a rush in the final eighth. OUT OF FIRE rushed up to take command approaching the far turn, but tired suddenly. RUDENIA faltered after a half.

Export Buying Pushes Wheat To 3-Year High

Chicago Advance Follows Rise in Liverpool and Winnipeg.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 14.—Enlarged export buying went hand in hand today with 2 cents a bushel rise of Chicago wheat prices to the topmost point in three years.

Liverpool and Winnipeg wheat markets led the way, outdoing in some cases the quotations that for six years have stood as peaks. Late estimates were that North American new export business today totaled 1,800,000 bushels, including 300,000 bushels of United States Pacific Coast wheat.

Chicago wheat futures closed unsettled at some reaction from the day's best level but 1 cent to 1½ cents above yesterday's finish. December, 116¾@116⅞; May, 115⅝@115¾; July, 100⅝@100½; corn unchanged to ⅝ higher; December, 95¼@95⅝; May, 90¼@90⅝; July, 86⅝; oats, ⅛ off to ⅛ up; December, 41⅝, and rye showing ½@1⅛ cents bulge. Provisions results varied from 2 cents decline to 17 cents gain.

Directors Re-elected By Southern Railway

Richmond, Va., Oct. 14.—At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Southern Railway Co., held in Richmond yesterday, the following directors whose terms expired in 1936 were re-elected for a further term of three years:

Robert M. Hanes, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Fairfax Harrison, Virginia, and Jackson E. Reynolds, of New York. Knight Woolly, of New York, was elected a director for three years to fill the vacancy in the class of 1938.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Irregular; Trading Less Active; Dollar Gains Against Pound and Franc.

New York, Oct. 14.—Stocks moved irregularly with a tendency to harden in the late trading, closing prices showing little advantage to either side. Trading volume at 1,500,000 shares was the smallest of the month. Bonds were narrow. Sterling drooped, as did francs, doubtless in accord with the new stabilization agreement, which perhaps recognized undervaluation of the dollar. December wheat rose half a cent to 116⅝ cents a bushel.

Profit taking and indecision again held back stocks, which lacked the exuberant opening action that they had yesterday. No large blocks of consequence appeared on the tape and with the exception of Telephone and a few preferred stocks, strength was not pronounced in any direction. Telephone was shoved along to a new high price above 180, on assurance of an improved earnings statement to follow publication of report of new telephone installations.

In spite of reports of a further increase in freight car loadings and rising passenger revenues, the railroad share market was unable to move out of a congested area. Some of the rails gained fractions and others lost a little. Santa Fe and Union Pacific broke away for gains of 2 points. Pennsylvania dipped a point and Nickel Plate lost 2 points. Nashville Chattanooga reached a new high price in active dealings at the odd-lot post, but Coast Line was little better than firm.

Motor prices held firm and public utilities turned in a score of small increases. Steel shares found selling pressure rather heavy, but gave up only fractions. Mail orders were mixed, as were the farm implements. Case jumped half a dozen points.

Some Broad Jumps.

On individual performance Lehigh Portland Cement convertible topped the list, rising neary 15 points, keeping in line with the common shares, which gained more than three points. Barker Brothers preferred rose 10 points to a record high price on news of a recapitalization plan to take care of the $30 dividend arrears. Almagamated Leather common dropped into the lowest ground in three years, but the preferred rose 2 points. This was the last day for dealing, as trading will start tomorrow in the new shares.

Business News Good.

Business news this week is bullish. Reports from the steel making centers are highly favorable. The Iron Age, in its midweek review, details heavy orders from the railroads, motor makers and other users, noting capacity orders at some steel plants and a shortage of freight cars for some deliveries. The reports read as they usually do when general business is highly prosperous. Railroad freight car loadings for last week, according to reports of leading carriers, will reach a new top for the year, with a small increase over the preceding week and a large gain over the corresponding week of a year ago. Production of electrical energy also was maintained last week at a record-breaking level.

National Bank Calls.

Has the Comptroller of the Currency intended to [illegible] for condition figures of national banks for the third quarter it is probable that he would have done so by this late date. The Comptroller last year surprised the banks by passing up the customary September 30 or early October date and then issuing a call for figures as of November 1. Unlike the banking authorities in this State, where the law requires four quarterly calls, the Comptroller has authority to skip a period so long as a minimum of three calls is made during the year. He has made two this year and is expected to make another in December. There is considerable interest in the possibility of his making a fourth as another surprise some time between now and December.

Discrepancy.

Railroad bondholders apparently are not optimistic on the chance of certain reorganization plans so far submitted to reach final approval. The Missouri Pacific management plan proposes to issue 100 per cent in convertible income series A 4 per cent notes to holders of the general 4s of 1975. The International-Great Northern adjustment 6s of 1952 would receive 30 per cent in the convertible incomes and 70 per cent in a senior issue of income general mortgage 5 per cent bonds. Yet the I-G.N. 6s are selling around 13, 4½ points below the Missouri Pacific general 4s of 1975.

Cotton Consumption.

Cotton consumption figures for September were highly favorable. They indicated a high rate of business activity in general and at the same time gave fresh proof of the beneficent effects of the Supreme Court's decision which nullified the processing taxes of the New Deal. Cotton consumption last month was nearly half again as large as in the corresponding month of last year, and nearly 10 per cent above that for August. Cotton exports also rose, foreshadowing a better balance of merchandising trade for September. The increase in cotton shipments last month was about 17 per cent over a year ago.

Losses on Sales.

To receive any substantial tax benefit from the decline in value of its investment in St. Louis-San Francisco Railway stock, reported here yesterday, Southern Pacific Co. will have to hope that the stocks are ignored in the Frisco reorganization. Individuals are allowed to deduct losses on sales of capital assets in amounts that vary with the length of time that the securities have been held, but corporations are allowed a deduction of only $2,000 against any profits on sales. However, if the stock becomes worthless in reorganization the whole amount may be treated as a deduction in the class with bad debts—in this case, $4,890,397 book value on 14,300 Frisco common and $148,209 on 1,600 preferred.

Rail Outlook Best in Years, Pelley Holds

Will Continue Essential Transport Agency, He Declares.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 14.— The future of the American railroads is brighter today than it has been in many years, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, said here today in an address before the American Life Convention.

"With the inherent efficiency of the rail method of moving business," Mr. Pelley said, "and with the equality of treatment and opportunity for which we hope, the railroads will continue to develop as the commerce of this continent develops they will continue to be the essential backbone of that commerce and, in the language of the railroads, they will 'make the grade.'

"The railroads are and will continue to be the essential agency of transportation. They are alert in bettering service and cutting unit costs. They have such efficiency as, with normal volume, makes possible their continued operation on a self-supporting profit-making basis. There is good reason for belief that those inequities in public policy, which have had the effect of reducing railroad volume and raising railroad costs, are on the way toward correction.

Equal Treatment Asked.

"There is a growing recognition on the part of the public that Government subsidy to competing forms of transportation adds to the burden of the taxpayer and that by diverting tonnage and reducing volume, increases the necessary cost of essential railroad service. Public recognition of a situation is the first step toward its correction. I feel that the chances of securing the equality of treatment which is all that railroads ask, or need, are better today than ever before.

"Railroad service," Mr. Pelley said, "has been essential in the upbuilding of America and is just as essential today. I say this with full recognition of the value and usefulness of other forms of transportation, but with the assured conviction that no one of them, nor all of them together, could physically meet the demands of the commerce of this continent."

So. Kraft to Build World's Largest Mill

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 14.—Decision of the Southern Kraft Corporation to construct the largest Kraft paper mill in the world, representing an investment of over $8,000,0000, with a designed capacity of over 625 tons per day, at Georgetown, S. C., was received today from J. C. Cullen, the paper company's president, by Warren T. White, general industrial agent of the Seaboard Air Line Railway here.

Contruction of the new plant, which is to begin immediately, gives employment to several hundred men for the next 12 months, when the mill is expected to begin active operation. At that time 1,200 are to be employed in the mill, with an additional thouand working in the woods. To complement the rail facilities already provided by the Seaboard Air Line Railway, Southern Kraft's plans contemplate the construction of a dock frontage of more than 1,500 feet on the 500-acre site with accommodations for ocean-going vessels.

Gen. Motors to Spend $25,000,000 Retooling

Detroit, Oct. 14 (AP).—Edward F. Fisher, manager of General Motors body-building division, said today more than $25,000,000 is being spent for retooling to produce bodies for the 1937 models of General Motors automobiles.

He estimated costs of $10,000,000 for dies, $11,000,000 for new machinery and building changes and $4,000,000 for rearrangement of production lines and equipment.

Railroad Orders Run Into Millions

San Francisco, Oct. 14 (AP).—Southern Pacific placed orders today for $3,410,000 worth of rails and accessories, officials said. The purchase were to be used partly in preparing the San Francisco-Los Angeles line for streamline high-speed trains, equipment already under construction. Some 50 miles of the Texas & New Orleans Railroad, a subsidiary, also will be improved.

Boston and Maine.

Boston, Oct. 14 (AP).—The Boston and Maine Railroad announced today that it had placed orders for ten new passenger and freight locomotives to cost approximately $1,000,000.

Five freight engines, costing about $125,000 each, were ordered from the Baldwin Locomotive Co. of Eddystone, and five passenger locomotives, to cost about $100,000 each, were ordered from the Lima Locomotive Co., in Lima, Ohio.

Seaboard Air Line.

Norfolk, Oct. 14.—With the addition of a half-million dollar purchase of coaches to its recent huge order for track supplies, the Seaboard Air Line Railway is preparing for a season which, officials predict, will be the biggest in the road's history.

The order, for 10 de luxe coaches, of the latest design and completely air-conditioned, has been placed by the receivers, L. R. Powell, jr., and Henry W. Anderson, with the Pullman Car & Manufacturing Co.

Export Copper Sales At Five-Year High

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Heavy European buying today sent the price of export copper to 9.97½ cents a pound, the highest level since April, 1931, when transactions were recorded at 10.05 cents. Observers attributed the heavy European purchases to increased requirements for armaments. On the London Metal Exchange the asking price for electrolytic copper reached the equivalent of 10 cents, also a five-year record. Domestic prices were unchanged at 9.75 cents.

Selling Checks Cotton Advance

New York, Oct. 14 (AP).—Early advances of 15 to 19 points in cotton today on active foreign and Wall Street buying met realizing and hedge selling which caused partial reactions late in the day. December sold off from 12.11 to 12.00 and closed at the low with the general market ending 2 to 8 points net higher.

The following is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Debentures.

THE COMPANY American Telephone and Telegraph Company, incorporated in New York in 1885, and its telephone subsidiaries are engaged principally in furnishing communication services, mainly telephone service, in the United States. The properties of the Company consist mainly of toll lines and toll switchboards, and those of its telephone subsidiaries consist mainly of exchange and toll lines, switchboards, buildings, telephone instruments and related equipment. The Company and its telephone subsidiaries are subject to regulation by the Federal Communications Commission and by public service commissions or state or local authorities, within their respective jurisdictions. The Federal Communications Commission is presently engaged in an investigation of the Company and its subsidiaries. Western Electric Company, Incorporated, a non-telephone subsidiary, is engaged principally in the manufacture of telephone apparatus and equipment about 90% of which is sold to the Company and its telephone subsidiaries.

CAPITALIZATION (The Company and its Principal Telephone Subsidiaries—Consolidated):

	Outstanding as of June 30, 1936
Funded Debt of subsidiaries consolidated	$ 437,594,275
Notes Sold to Trustee of Pension Funds—subsidiaries consolidated	114,373,295
Funded Debt of the Company	440,943,600
Notes Sold to Trustee of Pension Fund—Company	11,022,113
Preferred stocks of subsidiaries consolidated—held by the public	104,311,530
Common stocks of subsidiaries consolidated—held by the public	86,709,953*
Capital Stock (18,675,283 shares, par value $100) of the Company†	1,867,528,300

†As of June 30, 1936 there were 11,559 shares under subscription at $150 per share by employees (including officers) of the Company and of certain other corporations to which the Employees' Stock Plan was extended. 129,230 shares are authorized for issuance to cover conversions of certain bonds of the Company.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The net proceeds, exclusive of accrued interest, from the sale of the Debentures, after deducting the estimated expenses of the Company in connection with such sale, are expected to approximate $172,710,000 and are to be applied toward the retirement of the Company's presently outstanding issue of $117,964,700 of Thirty-Five Year Sinking Fund 5% Debentures, due January 1, 1960, which the Company intends to call for redemption on January 1, 1937 at 110% of their principal amount ($129,763,170) and accrued interest; and toward the retirement of the Company's presently outstanding issue of $64,865,200 of Thirty Year Five Per Cent. Collateral Trust Bonds, due December 1, 1946, which the Company is calling for redemption on December 1, 1936 at 105% of their principal amount ($68,108,460) and accrued interest. The Company expects to obtain the balance (approximately $25,182,000) of the requirements for such redemptions, exclusive of accrued interest, from its current cash and temporary cash investments.

EARNINGS The following figures are taken from the Consolidated Income Statements of the Company and its principal telephone subsidiaries in the Offering Prospectus and must be read in conjunction with such income statements and the notes appended thereto. The Offering Prospectus also contains separate Income Statements of the Company. The Registration Statement contains, in addition to the foregoing, Consolidated Profit and Loss Statements of Western Electric Company, Incorporated, and its 100% directly-owned subsidiaries.

*Negative amount.

The figures for 1934 reflect adjustments made in various accounts in connection with refunds ordered in certain rate cases.

Provision, if any required, for Federal surtax on undistributed earnings for 1936 cannot be determined until the end of the year.

Other Income includes dividend, interest and miscellaneous income of the consolidated group. It also includes the proportionate interest of the companies comprising the consolidated group in the earnings or deficits (after dividends) of all subsidiaries not consolidated, including Western Electric Company.

DEBENTURES The Twenty-Five Year 3¼% Debentures will be issued under an Indenture dated as of October 1, 1936 between the Company and Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company (New York City), Trustee. This issue of Debentures is not secured. It is limited to $175,000,000 but the Indenture does not limit the amount of other securities or indebtedness, either secured or unsecured, which may be issued or incurred by the Company or by subsidiaries of the Company. The Indenture contains a covenant that if the Company shall pledge as security for any indebtedness or obligations any stock, owned by it at the date of said Indenture or thereafter acquired, of any telephone corporation doing business in the United States of America, or of any corporation owning 50% or more of the voting securities of any such telephone corporation, the Company will secure the outstanding Debentures of this issue ratably with the indebtedness or obligations secured by such pledge.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions, the Underwriters named in the Offering Prospectus have severally agreed to purchase an aggregate of $150,000,000 of these Debentures from the Company at 99%, or a total of $148,500,000, plus accrued interest. Such Debentures are to be offered to the public at 101%, or a total of $151,500,000, plus accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 2%, or a total of $3,000,000. There is no firm commitment for the remaining $25,000,000 of Debentures, but the Company is withholding such Debentures for sale, on or before January 1, 1937, only to the Trustee of Pension Funds established by the Company and by certain of its subsidiaries, without underwriting discounts or commissions, at 99%, or a total of $24,750,000, plus accrued interest.

Price 101% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters, including the undersigned and the others named in the Offering Prospectus, have agreed to purchase $150,000,000 of these Debentures on the terms and conditions set forth in the Purchase Agreement, including the approval of legal matters by Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and Mr. Charles M. Bracelen, counsel for the Company. It is expected that delivery of Debentures in temporary form will be made at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. on or about October 22, 1936, against payment therefor in New York funds.

As set forth in the Offering Prospectus, the Underwriters have authorized the purchase and sale, in the open market or otherwise, of Debentures for their several accounts, either for long or short account within the limits and during the period set forth in the Agreement between themselves.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from the undersigned or from any other underwriter of this issue.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

Today's hand was played in a recent team-of-four match in England. I was intensely surprised to note that a British bridge magazine characterized the failure of a five-spade contract as an "unlucky hand," one of the commentators going on to say that the declarer had made a very unfortunate guess. Let us see how much of a guess was involved!

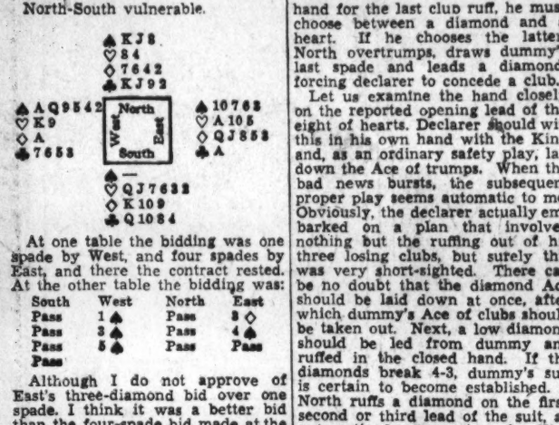
North-South vulnerable.



At one table the bidding was one spade by West, and four spades by East, and there the contract rested. At the other table the bidding was:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	5 ♣	Pass	Pass
Pass

Although I do not approve of East's three-diamond bid over one spade, I think it was a better bid than the four-spade bid made at the other table. This team, at any rate, approached the slam, which certainly should have been bid on their combined holdings. The fact that a slam could not have been made except by double-dummy play does not alter the fact that it should have been reached—it was cold against any division of trumps except all three in North's hand.

The surprising part, however, was that West, who is one of England's best players, failed to make even five, and in commenting on this failure the magazine said:

"As to the play in five spades,-if the first two cards played by the declarer are the King of hearts and the Ace of spades, the time will come when, in order to return to his hand for the last club ruff, he must choose between a diamond and a heart. If he chooses the latter, North overtrumps, draws dummy's last spade and leads a diamond, forcing declarer to concede a club."

Let us examine the hand closely on the reported opening lead of the eight of hearts. Declarer should win this in his own hand with the King and, as an ordinary safety play, lay down the Ace of trumps. When the bad news bursts, the subsequent proper play seems automatic to me. Obviously, the declarer actually embarked on a plan that involved nothing but the ruffing out of his three losing clubs, but surely this was very short-sighted. There can be no doubt that the diamond Ace should be laid down at once, after which dummy's Ace of clubs should be taken out. Next, a low diamond should be led from dummy and ruffed in the closed hand. If the diamonds break 4-3, dummy's suit is certain to become established. If North ruffs a diamond on the first, second or third lead of the suit, an automatic finesse against the King in South's hand becomes established. If, on the other hand, the diamond suit does not split and North holds the length in the suit, declarer goes calmly about his business of cross-ruffing diamonds and clubs.
